MORE CARR ART GONE

Four more Emily Carr paintings valued in excess of $5,000 have disappeared from the Newcombe collection in the provincial archives, Victoria police reported today.

The discovery was made after an inventory of the collection was conducted earlier this week.

The inventory had been sparked after a watercolor of a gravehouse by the noted B.C. artist surfaced last week.

The missing paintings are described as:

- Number 108, Rivers Inlet, measuring about eight by ten inches and valued at $2,000.
- Number 106, a watercolor of the Songhees Reserve, measuring eight by ten inches.
- Number 106A, a scene of an Indian village on the reverse side of the previous painting. Together the two paintings are valued at $3,000.
- Number 132, an Indian design probably done in indian ink, size not known, and worth between $100 and $200.

Forest Firms, B.C. In Joint Project?

The B.C. government has approached MacMillan Bloedel Ltd. and other companies to join in a $118 million forestry development, according to Socred MLA Jim Chabot Columbia River).

Chabot said Ray Jones, chairman of the government-owned B.C. Cellulose, approached MB to form a consortium wieh the government to build a new sawmill and pulp or newsprint mill at Ocean Falls.

The Socred would not reveal his sources but said they are reliable.

He said he did not know MB's response to the offer but now the government is approaching other private enterprises to join the consortium.

The government is also planning a new housing project at Roscoe Bay, 15 miles north of Ocean Falls, said Chabot.

Resources Minister Bob Williams, responding to Chabot's statements during debate of Williams' spending estimates, said the government has always said it is willing to contemplate a mixture of partners in developing Ocean Falls.

There is a possibility of a number of corporations becoming involved in future development, including European interests, he said.

But Williams did not specifically answer Chabot's statement about the $118 million price tag on a consortium development.

Chabot said he had proof the department of housing is planning a housing development at Roscoe Bay despite the fact Housing Minister Lorne Nicolson denied last week he had any knowledge of such a scheme.

Williams said no discussions have been held with Nicolson but the project is being considered "at the corporate level only."

Outside consultants are working with Ocean Falls Corp. and B.C. Cellulose in studying the possibility of housing at the site, he added.

Williams said the government is leaving all the options for the area open, adding the area does have urban and industrial potential.

"There's terrific potential for industrial expansion on the central coast and we are having active discussions to see that the potential is realized."

ROYAL VISIT

OTTAWA (CP) — The Queen will open the 1976 Olympic Games in Montreal, Government House announced today.

She will be accompanied by Prince Philip, who will attend equestrian events in his capacity as president of the Federation Equestre Internationale.

Further details are to be announced later.

No City CRTC Visit

Victoria city council has not sent anyone to make its intervention in person at the Canadian Radio-Television Commission hearings on applications for Channel 10, Mayor Peter Pollen said Tuesday.

The city's written brief asking that the CRTC give the channel to the applicant providing the best Victoria coverage will stand on its own, he said.

The mayor said he telexed the CRTC to say the reason council was sending no one over was because it was only allowed 10 minutes to speak and was not allowed to question the applicants for the channel.

Other groups making interventions, such as the Victoria citizens' group Publicair, have also been limited in the time they are allowed to speak.

Interventions for and against the applicants for Channel 10 will be dealt with today by the CRTC, which sat into the night Tuesday hearing applications for the last remaining VHF channel in the Vancouver-Victoria area.

Although hundreds of organizations and individuals have filed interventions, 17 will present their arguments in person before the commission.

Three private groups have applied for channel 10: Pacific Rim Broadcasting Ltd., Ten Television Ltd., and Western Approaches Ltd.

Western Approaches has said it wants a UHF licence on Channel 26 if the VHF licence for Channel 10 is unavailable.

It also faces opposition from a group making a bid for the UHF licence only.

Channel Twenty-six Ltd. is associated with Channel Seventynine Ltd., which operates the City-TV UHF channel in Toronto, and is known for its late-night movies that contain nudity.

The hearing was told Channel Twenty-six will borrow for three years the CITY-TV management team, to help establish the UHF outlet in Vancouver.

The Western Approaches application was made by Bill Bellman, president of Q Broadcasting Ltd., which operates CHQM-AM and FM radio in Vancouver and CKPG and CKPG TV in Prince george.

The submission proposed an independent, Vancouver-owned, Vancouver-oriented station with the main thrust of programming on three major-magazine style shows daily.

First of the intervenors will be the provincial government which has already made public its statement. The government opposes all three commercial contenders for channel 10 and asks the CRTC to adopt a policy ordering all television licencees in British Columbia to provide time for government educational programming.

The CBC also will oppose the Channel 10 applicants because it wants the channel for a Victoria-based operation of its own.

SURPRISE LOSER in what looks like a no-contest tug-of-war will be Brandy, a 2½-year-old St. Bernard whose owners have decided he has to go. Lynne Ellis of Toronto, owner of the dog since it was 10 weeks old, gave birth to son Jamie 10 months ago and finds the twosome too much to handle. Brandy is awaiting a new owner in the Society for Animals in Distress office.

Skipper Finally Retires

"I quit."

Yes, naturalist Freeman (Skipper) King has been saying for years he was going to give up his job as a Goldstream provincial park naturalist, but when he said it today, he meant it.

Skipper who is 84, with 14 years service with the parks branch, said he should have done so years ago.

"It was too much for me . . . I knew it, but kept on going," he said.

He explained as many as 200 children a day are taken on nature tours of the park.

"There is no let up, and for me it was getting a bit wearisome," he said.

But if Skipper's many friends think he has quit being a naturalist, they are all wrong. The preservation of nature — the trees, flowers, birds, animals and insects — is too important for him.

He has quit his job in one park to go to work in another — Thomas Francis Park in the Highlands.

But there is a difference. In the latter he will be working without pay as a volunteer, and free to come and go as he chooses.

"I'll be at Thomas Francis Park if the kids want to see me," he said. "I'll be glad to show them around."

David Stirling in charge of the nature interpretation program for the parks branch, said the branch was sorry to see Skipper go.

He said the nature interpretation program for school children would continue at Goldstream under naturalist Jennifer Beckett and Jennifer Saari.

Viet Cong Reject Plea For Truce From Saigon

Times News Services

South Vietnam appealed today for a cease-fire and negotiations guaranteed to give the Viet Cong a share of power in the South Vietnamese government.

The appeal was promptly rejected by Viet Cong spokesmen in both Saigon and Paris.

The two-day-old government of Tran Van Huong which is trying to head off a full-scale communist assault against Saigon, made the offer in diplomatic language free of the rhetoric of past communiques and made no attempt to blame the Communists for the deteriorating military situation in South Vietnam.

"We consider this demand as unacceptable since it does not meet the conditions necessary for a true settlement of the Vietnameses problem," a Paris spokesman said.

"The proposal fools no one and will hardly help the Americans out of their defeat," said the Viet Cong delegation in Saigon.

Huong was "only a puppet and part of a game manipulated by the Americans to keep the Thieu clique without Thieu, continue a policy of neocolonialism, sabotage the Paris agreement and interfere with the right to self-determination of the South Vietnamese people," a spokesman added.

An explosive device, meanwhile, blew up in a crowded market in downtown Saigon today, killing or wounding more than six persons and spreading panic.

The North Vietnamese army is so close to the city that South Vietnamese commanders moved the govern-

Air Canada Paris Staff On Strike

PARIS (AP) — Personnel at Air Canada went on strike in Paris today, immobilizing a jetliner that was due to leave for Montreal, a spokesman for the employees said.

About 100 out of the company's 104-person Paris staff went on strike to protest the company's plans to fire 47 employees in an economy move, the strike spokesman said.

"All ground personnel, employees and technical staff are not working," he said. "We are not occupying the plane but it cannot leave." The spokesman said the strike was "indefinite."

The spokesman said the company had told employees the dismissals were meant to save $50,000 in the first year and $300,000 in the following three years.

Alcohol Tops Crash Causes

A compelling need for vigorous enforcement of laws relating to impaired driving was stressed in a report to the legislature Tuesday by Highways Minister Graham Lea.

Alcohol was involved in 228 of the 518 accidents which caused 625 deaths in 1974, the report showed. Of those 228 accidents, 14 per cent involved one or more impaired drivers. The year before 635 were killed in 522 accidents.

As in previous years the report states, responsibility for the majority of fatal accidents must be placed on the shoulders of careless drivers and pedestrians.

Human error connected with drug and alcohol intake, excessive speed, lack of seat belts, and illness or fatigue, all took their toll of B.C.'s motorists.

A failure of motorists to use seat belts drew special mention. Seat belts were not used in 74 per cent of the fatalities, an increase from the previous year's rate of 67 per cent.

"This tends to show a public disregard of the government's Is Your Safety Belt Fastened? highway sign program under way for four years."

Roadside hazards continue to constitute a major hazard, with steep banks, and ditches, utility poles, trees and man-made constructions, the final cause of death in many instances.

The majority of fatal accidents occurred at dusk, between 5 and 6 p.m., accounting for almost eight per cent of the total.

Progress Claimed In CUPE Talks

Significant progress was made for the first time Tuesday in mediation of Greater Victoria civic workers' dispute, but the possibilty of a settlement within a day or two remains over-optimistic according to a management source.

Two days of talks at Royal Oak Inn adjourned until Thursday morning after provincial mediator Clark Gilmour excused himself to meet another commitment today.

Adjournment came some four hours after elected representatives detached themselves from municipal administrators conducting the bargaining through Gilmour, who meets with employers and Canadian Union of Public Employees in separate conference rooms.

"Some very significant progress is being made toward a settlement," the source said. Both sides in the dispute, now 13½ weeks old, recognize that "things are in very good balance," he said.

It was understood the base labor rate for outside workers had been negotiated to within about 10 cents an hour of a rate agreeable to both sides.

However, a report attributed to a union spokesman suggesting a settlement of more than $6 an hour is possible was described as "ridiculous" by the management source.

Union spokesman Tom Smith agreed that some progress was made Tuesday. "I don't want to get people's hopes up. I don't want to be pessimistic or optimistic at this time," Smith said.

"But after three months, hopefully there could be something to take to the membership soon."

Two more days of mediation are scheduled for this week, with the locale changing to School District 61 administration centre and the Camosun College Ewing building. Gilmour will continue to meet the sides independently, going from one building to the other.

JACKLIN SAFETY ACTION PROMISED

Highways Minister Graham Lea promised action today to improve pedestrian safety along Jacklin Road in the vicinity of Belmont-Fisher secondary school.

Lea and Municipal Affairs Minister Jim Lorimer met Jim Campbell, chairman of the Capital Regional Board, and Campbell said later the highways minister said steps would be taken to reduce hazards to those walking along Jacklin.

The road has become a major traffic artery linking the Trans-Canada Highway with the Sooke district and is also the route walked by many children to and from school. Near accidents involving traffic and the heavy flow of pedestrians have produced complaints and petitions.

Campbell said what action to be taken was not detailed but it may be in the form of better separation between road and foot traffic, possibly involving curbing, a verge or preparation of a path for walkers.

The regional board chairman also said that Lorimer has undertaken to speed the process of establishing a committee to study and make recommendations on some form of municipal government for the Colwood-Langford area.

NEWS BRIEFS

Dollar Skidding

BRUSSELS (UPI) — A sudden wave of selling sent the U.S. dollar into a slide today on all major European money markets. Gold rose. "Everybody is selling dollars," said one Belgian banker, offering no explanation.

CoL Slows in U.S.

WASHINGTON (WP) — The increase in the cost of living slowed further in the U.S. during March, the labor department reported Tuesday, providing strong evidence that the inflationary spiral of 1973 and 1974 is over.

Jet Emergency

OTTAWA (CP) — An Air Canada DC-9 jet was forced to make an emergency landing at Ottawa International Airport Tuesday after mechanical problems developed in one of its two engines. Cause of the problem still is not known.

Longshore Bill

OTTAWA (CP) — A bill to end the three-week strike by 3,200 Quebec longshoremen was introduced in the Commons today by Labor Minister John Munro.

POSTIES BACK ON JOB

OTTAWA (CP) — Letter carriers across Canada returned to work today as a "sign of good faith in bargaining" according to Roger Decarie, president of the Letter Carriers' Union.

Decarie said the selective strike action of the union, which began Monday, would be called off "for one day only" while post office and union negotiators held a "very important meeting."

Mail in Victoria was slowed to a trickle Tuesday and early today as a result of the Vancouver walkout.

Canada Drops Claim for Birds' Spill Deaths

By FRANK RUTTER
Times Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON — Canada has given up a claim that the United States owes it compensation for 30 birds, valued at $2 each, three years after a oil spill in which the birds died.

The $60 question, which remains unanswered, was regarded as extremely important because of the precedent involved in settling liability for damages caused by oil spills.

Getting an answer is of growing concern as the time nears when increased numbers of large tankers will be carrying cargoes of oil from the Trans-Alaska pipeline down the West Coast and into the narrow waters separating British Columbia from Washington State, a situation that Canadians fear will inevitably produce a spill of great magnitude.

It was on June 4, 1972, that a connecting joint ruptured on a flow line from the Liberian tanker World Bond to the Atlantic Richfield Company terminal at Cherry Point.

Seventy barrels — or 2,940 gallons — of Iranian crude oil spilled from the ruptured line into the waters of northern Puget Sound.

The spill was cleaned up within six days and Arco, sensitive to public opinion, quickly agreed in principle to pay the costs.

It was not as simple as that, however. It took until now to wind up the case, and even now the key questions of liability remain unresolved.

One basic disagreement has been whether the U.S. government or a private U.S. company should be liable for the results of an oil spill.

Ottawa has maintained that the government is liable. Washington has refused to accept any liability.

Canada won a small point by conducting all negotiations with Arco through the State department, believing that this implies some government liability.

State department, however, insists that it was merely a conduit.

All Canadian attempts failed to get the U.S. government to actually pay for damages, even for the birds.

Last November, Arco wrote Ottawa a cheque for $11,000 to pay for labor involved in cleaning up the spill on the B.C. side.

As the spill was small, Ottawa did not pursue a claim for physical damage to the shoreline. But it did persist in its claim for $60 for the dead sea birds.

Neither the U.S. nor Arco would pay the $60 and this week Ottawa gave up what could have been a precedent-setting cause.

In its note to the State department, Ottawa said it continues to hold the view that someone is liable for damage to wildlife, and reserves the right to pursue future claims.

Aside from refusing direct liability, the U.S. also argued that it was impossible to set a value on birds or to be sure that the birds were Canadian residents.

Wallace, Williams Row Over Harbor

Oak Bay Tory Scott Wallace failed Tuesday to get Resources Minister Bob Williams to elaborate on provincial government proposals for Victoria's Inner Harbor.

Williams said the government has been far from passive in assessing future development of the Reid site.

"The rational process is under way" and single management of the Reid site, the Princess Marguerite and 8.7 acres formerly owned by Marathon Realty, makes so much sense, he said.

The Princess Marguerite is an integral part of the harbor "and it might very well be the Princess Marguerite will have a special role in the winter time.

"For a conservative to call this inaction — my god he'd have to move to the left of me."

Williams said he has been strengthening the staff in the department's land branch to deal with development of the harbor area "and the next step is legislation."

"People of Greater Victoria feel the whole issue of the Inner Harbor is such a disjointed mish-mash mess — and no one really knows what's going on."

The final comic relief, said Wallace, was the announcement that Williams had been given jurisdiction over the Princess Marguerite.

"There's been a whole year of inaction," said Wallace.

Williams commended his government for intervening when developers proposed to obliterate the landscape.

"Victoria council didn't have the sensitivity of fine landscape . . .," said Williams.

"Intervention was necessary so highrise urban blight wouldn't take place."

Victoria Mayor Peter Pollen reacted strongly to statements in the legislature Monday by Municipal Affairs Minister Jim Lorimer that the purchase of the Canadian Pacific property in the Inner Harbor was discussed with council beforehand.

Calling Lorimer's statements a distortion of the facts, the mayor said he first heard of the purchase by a call from Premier Barrett about half an hour before the acquisition was announced to the press.

DONORS ANSWER RARE BLOOD CALL

An urgent call from Royal Jubilee Hospital Tuesday night for four units of a rare type of blood quickly produced the needed donors.

Dr. A. C. Pickles, executive director at Jubilee, said today the blood was needed for two patients, men aged 69 and 52, who were suffering from internal bleeding. They are both in improved condition today.

Local radio stations responded to a Red Cross request for B negative blood doonrs. Blood clinics Tuesday had produced two of the four units needed and listeners quickly responded with the other two. Only 1.5 per cent of the population has B negative blood type.

Roberts Bank Out as Site

Roberts Bank has been ruled out as a possible site for B.C.'s new oil refinery, Premier Barrett announced today.

After a lengthy meeting this morning between the cabinet committee and B.C. Petroleum Corp. officials, Barrett said initial investigations of possible sites for the refinery show the environmental impact on Roberts Bank would be too great to overcome.

(See also Page 23.)

But three other sites — Surrey, Merritt and Clinton — are still being considered and the preliminary studies show that environmental problems at those sites would be minimal, he said.

The premier promised however that if councils in those areas decide they do not wish to have a refinery the government will respect those decisions.

The government will seek meetings with the three councils as soon as possible, he said, and all preliminary social-economic and environmental studies will be presented to them for their consideration.

Barrett said the preliminary studies show that construction of a refinery is "not only technically feasible and desirable but it is possible to have a very limited-pollution refinery."

Saigon Truce Plea Spurned

ment's last planes out of Bien Hoa today in advance of an expected Communist assault against the base only 14 miles north of the capital.

The communist forces have advanced to within striking distance of Saigon in recent days, but have yet to launch a full-scale assault.

An estimated 150,000 communist troops were believed to be within four miles of Saigon and the government has only 50,000 soldiers in the area.

Elsewhere on the war front, the Saigon command said the South Vietnamese army had withdrawn from Ham Tan, capital of Binh Tuy province on the coast 75 miles east of Saigon.

The United States airlift of Americans and South Vietnamese continued but was ordered switched from Clark Air Base in the Philippines to Guam.

Officials said more than 6,000 evacuees now crowding Clark would be flown to Anderson Air Base on Guam.

As many as 131,000 refugees were expected to pass through Guam in the next few weeks, a Guam official said.

Another source said about 60,000 refugees were expected in the next 10 days, nearly doubling the island's population.

Corporate Probe Draws Criticism

Times News Services

OTTAWA — Opposition spokesmen today welcomed the government's announcement Tuesday that a Royal Commission will investigate corporate power in Canada, but provincial and business reaction was critical.

Opposition Leader Robert Stanfield, "at the risk of antagonizing the unions," asked whether other concentrations of economic power in other sectors such as the trade union movement would be investigated as well.

Max Saltsman (NDP—Waterloo-Cambridge) asked whether the inquiry would try to find out whether power actually is held by corporations or whether it is held by the government which has failed to use it to curb the corporations.

Prime Minister Trudeau made in reply what he termed a confession that cabinet was unable to reach "a final position" on the concentration of economic power in corporations, and that he had for this reason decided to set up the royal commission.

He invited the New Democrats to make recommendations to deal with economic power concentrations in trade unions as "the other aspect" of the question.

In Victoria, Attorney-General Alex Macdonald said he thinks the federal government is moving too far into the field of securities which is a provincial matter.

Federal attempts to control foreign ownership are unsuccessful and it is unlikely Ottawa will be successful with this investigation, he said, adding that the provinces have the ability to pass legislation to protect the public from corporate abuse.

Premier Barrett declined comment until he had more information on the functions of the commission.

Corporate reaction was critical.

Frisco MDs Hold Back

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — Many doctors in San Francisco plan to treat only emergency cases next week to protest huge increases in malpractice insurance rates.

Doctors who last year paid about $5,000 each for such insurance are now facing a new rates of up to $18,000. The cost for such insurance in 1960 was about $300 annually.

Dr. John Driscoll, president of the San Francisco Medical Society said Tuesday that the group "supports and endorses" the refusal of doctors to pay the new insurance rates and their refusal to work without malpractice protection.

U.S. Oil Profits Sag

NEW YORK (AP) — U.S. oil companies with world wide operations reported earnings declines Tuesday ranging between 11 per cent and 66 per cent from last year's post-embargo peaks.

Exxon Corp., the world's largest oil producer, said first-quarter profits fell 11.1 per cent.

Texaco Inc., the second-largest U.S. oil firm, said first-quarter earnings fell 66 per cent below last year and Gulf Oil Corp., the fourth largest, said its three-month profits were down 33 per cent from a similar period last year.

The U.S. Tax Reduction Act of 1975, which repealed the oil depletion allowance for large oil companies and changed some of their foreign tax credits, sizeably reduced earnings, the companies said.

The companies also said the world-wide recession, which has lowered industrial activity, consumer conservation and warmer weather combined to cut volume sales and reduce earnings.

First-quarter profits fell to $590 million, or $2.64 a share, in the first three months of 1975 against $666 million, or $2.97 a share, a year earlier. Exxon earned $508 million in the first-quarter of 1973, before the embargo.

GRAHAM'S FLEET BEATS BOB'S

If you think the B.C. Ferries under Transport Minister Robert Strachan is big and busy, then how about B.C.'s other fleet operated under Highways Minister Graham Lea?

It's bigger.

Statistics released Tuesday by Lea showed that highways department ferries carried 2.5 million vehicles and 6.5 million passengers in 1974, compared to 2.2 million and 5.9 million respectively in 1973.

Some 35 routes are under jurisdiction of the department apart from ferries served by the B.C. Ferries. Fleet includes 20 major ferries, nine reaction ferries, four cable ferries, five subsidized vessels and three miscellaneous ferries. There are also two tugs and six barges maintained for emergency purposes.

Strachan's department controls 23 ferries.

$25,000 Acid Bail

VANCOUVER (CP) — Bail totalling $25,000 was set in provincial court Tuesday for four of five persons charged with possession of about $5 million in LSD for th purpose of trafficking.

The fifth person, Robert Dupree, 26, formerly of Chicago, Ill., will appear Friday to show cause why he should be allowed bail. Those on bail also will appear in provincial court Friday to have a date set for trial.

The five were charged after more than a pound of LSD was seized last Wednesday when police raided a house in the city's Kitsilano area. The court imposed a ban on publication of evidence at the bail hearings.

Alberta Round-up

EDMONTON (CP) — Almost four months of RCMP investigation in Alberta's smaller cities and towns ended Tuesday with the arrest of 40 alleged drug traffickers.

An RCMP spokesman today said a total of 72 trafficking charges have been laid in the province-wide roundup of alleged dealers in soft drugs and chemicals. Forty were arrested Tuesday, while an additional 20 persons were given notices to appear in court at later dates to face charges.

S.Sgt. Gus Buziak, head of the RCMP Edmonton subdivision drug squad, said the roundup began three to four months ago and was one of the largest in the province.

"I think for the province, for the smaller centres, it's the biggest," the Staff Sergeant said.

VANCOUVER (CP) — Two rookie police officers completed six months of undercover work Tuesday as charges were laid against 107 suspected drug pushers.

Squads of officers armed with stacks of warrants have arrested 31 of the suspects and more police were out today looking for other suspects.

"These are the worst level of drug dealers," said Ken Larky, one of two detectives who organized the roundup. "These are the ones selling to young kids on the street and selling in schools. They are the ones who make drugs so readily available in the city."

Of those charged on the warrants, 67 were wanted for trafficking in heroin one for morphine and 42 for dealing in soft drugs. Several people were charged with more than one count.

Detectives Larky and Gordie Spencer laid aside all other work since the undercover operation began Oct. 1, 1974.

The two young constables who went underground a 22-year-old woman and 23-year-old man — were chosen straight out of the police academy. Police requested their names be withheld.

Unarmed and with no identification, they worked the Granville Mall and skid road areas, the worst spots in the city for drugs, Larky said.

Most of the skid road buys were made on one block, 100 East Hastings.

With the detectives shadowing behind them, the young pair made small drug buys. The capsules of heroin sold for $30 to $35 each. The soft drugs were somewhat cheaper.

Larky said when the operation began there was a brief period when the constables had some difficulty getting heroin because of the scarcity of pushers resulting from the last large-scale drug roundup by city police.

Last July, 101 warrants were sworn against drug traffickers following a similar type of operation.

"But the pushers keep coming back. It's a ludicrous market. You take one off the street and he's replaced by another almost overnight," Larky said.

"Anyone who thinks drugs are not readily available here is crazy."

MEXICO CITY (UPI) — A strong earth tremor shook Mexico City early today. There were no immediate reports of damage or casualties. A light earthquake also was reported in the United States in the Seattle region late Tuesday.

Faceless Money 'Bad Luck'

PORT MORESBY, New Guinea (UPI) — Some Papua natives shun new Guinea's new money because there are no human faces on any of the coins and notes.

According to native tradition, money which does not carry the face of a leader or ancestor has no "power."

The new coins and notes, which are gradually being substituted for Australian money as the South Pacific territory moves toward independence, carry designs of art objects and things which once served as items of exchange in Papua-New Guinea tribal society.

New Look May Delay Maggie

The Princess Marguerite will have a new look, inside and out, when she makes her first Victoria-Seattle run.

The run, originally scheduled for May 23, may have to be postponed until May 28 in order to complete the refurbishing.

Esquimalt MLA Jim Gorst, head of the Marguerite's advisory committee, said her hull will be painted white and a Union Jack painted on her funnel and stern.

The Union Jack, he said, would be a bow to British tradition and appeal to American tourists.

Interior colors will be soft red and green with carpeting to match.

The main structural change will be the conversion of the upper car deck into a lounge area. A 100-seat dining room and cafeteria is also planned.

Ah, Cheese

TORONTO (CP) — Investigators from Canada Customs and the dairy division of Agriculture Canada last week seized books, records and cheese samples from 24 pizza parlors, eight cheese distributors and six cheese importers in Ontario, Quebec and British Columbia.

If charges are laid, they will be under the Export and Import Permit Act, which decrees that imported natural cheese must be sold directly to consumers and not be mixed with other cheeses or ingredients.

They put more into them, so you'll get more out.

Gibson's Heat Controls.
These are "variable" heat controls. This means you're not locked into fixed heating levels. You're free to dial any degree of heat you choose.

Gibson's Digital Clock.

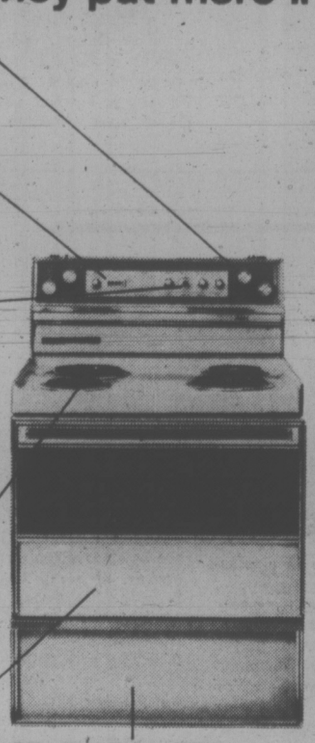
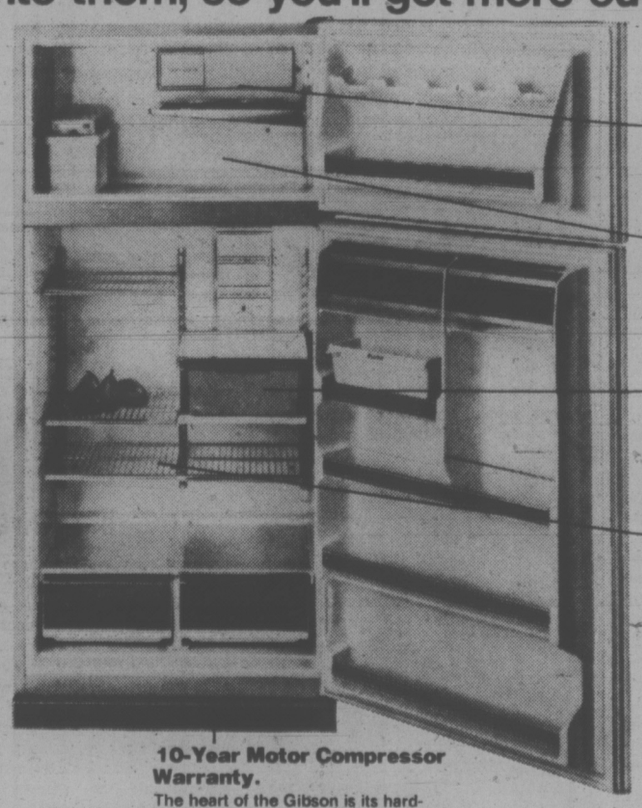
Gibson's "Bake-Hold" feature.
This control puts an automatic chef at your disposal. Dial the baking temperature and cooking time and your orders are followed, to the degree and to the minute. Another Gibson exclusive: the oven keeps its contents at a ready-to-serve temperature. Indefinitely.

Gibson's Heating Elements.
The two marked by red discs are an 8" High-Speed, for large pots, and a 6" High-Speed for small pans. The blue disc marks a 6" True Simmer that'll give you constant low heat. All plug out (and have continuous clean drip bowls) for easy cleaning.

Gibson's Big Oven.
It's one of the biggest you can buy. And its "Continuous Clean" sides, top and bottom means that it cleans itself as you bake. Non-tip chromed racks slide in and out easily to adjust to any height.



Gibson's Storage Drawer.
It's big. It'll hold your entire stock of pots and pans with little trouble. And it's so very useful. Once you own a Gibson you'll wonder how you managed without this practical floor-level feature.



Gibson's Frost-Clear.
You'll never find a fleck of frost in here. But you will find a unique curved ice-cube container that's a push-over for ejecting cubes.

Gibson's Freezer Section.
It stores a generous 4.1 cu. ft. This means you can buy meat at bargain prices and store it for as long as it suits you—up to 140-lbs. of it.

Gibson's 7-Day Meat-Keeper.
A great new idea that keeps meat appetizingly fresh without freezing it into a solid lump. The Meat Keeper will keep 16-lbs. of meat that way.

Gibson's Refrigerator Section.
It holds 12.4 cu. ft. of food, which is about right for most families—but not for anyone planning to start a fast food chain. Notice: No frost. Notice, too, 4 split cantilever shelves which are adjustable.

Gibson's Slim-Wall Construction.

10-Year Motor Compressor Warranty.
The heart of the Gibson is its hard-working compressor. It supplies the power that keeps everything cool. We have enough confidence in our power unit to back it in writing for 10 long years.

Houses at Any Cost

Canada's housing problems have been building since the late sixties yet the federal government has done little to alleviate what is now a crisis in moderately priced housing. When former Transport Minister Paul Hellyer realized his much bally-hooed task force on housing was just a political football he resigned from cabinet in 1969. Since then minor tinkering has aided house builders and investors rather than average consumers.

In 1974, 222,000 housing starts were achieved, nearly 20 per cent below the 1973 level. This year Urban Affairs Minister Barney Danson talks of 210,000 starts, enough in his opinion to handle new family formations and immigration. The government points with pride to its $500 grant on the purchase of a first home, plus the Registered Home Ownership Savings Plan allowing deductible contributions of $1,000 per year to a lifetime $10,000 maximum. Building and investment bait includes halving federal sales tax from 11 to five per cent, allowing capital cost allowances on apartments to be charged against income from other sources until Dec. 31, 1975.

What more could we ask for? Such measures guarantee incentives for housing. At what price though? Apartment vacancy rates remain low and house prices are high. Home prices, high interest rates, shortage of high ratio mortgage funds and lack of serviced land in major urban centres often puts these statistical castles out of reach of the people who need them most.

On the provincial scene Housing Minister Lorne Nicolson's beleaguered department has loads of blueprints but little concrete and siding after two and one half years — a fact reflected in provincial housing starts. Only 930 starts in February were counted in 19 urban centres, down 41 per cent from 1974. Central Mortgage and Housing said province-wide housing starts numbered 2,282 in the first two months of 1975, down 21 per cent from the corresponding period in 1974. Yet the provincial policy — if it ever gets off the ground — is good in theory and expressly aimed at providing moderately priced homes.

But looking at the nation as a whole it is a sad story. An abundance of housing over $60,000 per unit is on the market yet moderately priced homes are only found in the hinterlands, away from urban centres where 80 per cent of the population lives. Meanwhile, Urban Affairs Minister Danson appears lost in some Jeffersonian dream of small cities and suburban population units. It is time the federal government forgot its lofty romantic theorizing and started some pragmatic thinking on national housing problems. Perhaps it should face inflated realities and tell people they can never hope to own a house with a white picket fence unless they have an annual income over $16,000. If that is unpalatable politically, Finanee Minister John Turner could make mortgage interest payments tax deductible in his May budget. Any plausible direction would be welcomed at this stage.

Ensuring that all those nice homes are built is laudable. But if the majority of the nation can't afford the price tags, the houses won't keep anybody warm, least of all an insensitive government.

The Marguerite 18 Ways

Like an image slowly taking shape in Madame Zoe's crystal ball, we see it now—the weird and wonderful Princess Marguerite which will result from the specialized input of that 18-strong advisory committee under the chairmanship of Esquimalt MLA Jim Gorst. Sam Lane, owner of the Olde England Inn, is one of the motley crew so there's bound to be lots of olde Tudor beams, miniature thatched roofs for the deck ventilators and four-poster beds in the staterooms. Victorian Days promoter Helen Beirnes is another, and if she has her way the captain will wear frock coat and top hat at all times, while his crew are also suitably decked out in period garb.

Then's there's Charles Barber, of Cool-Aid fame. Will he insist on a combined hostel and drop-in centre for seaborne youth? Ben Pires, the provincial housing department's p.r. man, will probably cash in on the soft-sell potential. How about models of the Casa Loma motel displayed at various key points around the vessel, and perhaps heart-warming messages from the minister interspersed among the public address announcements? One-act plays from Bastion Theatre (Helen Simpson-Blaikie), seminars on trade unionism (Burt Grainger, past president of Victoria Labor Council), huge blow-ups of Playboy centrefolds to enliven the decor (Sid Kovnats, owner of Palace News) ...

Gosh, the possibilities are fantastic.

Emily Carr

The strange circumstances surrounding the recovery of an Emily Carr watercolor absent for a decade from the provincial archives of British Columbia points up the rather shabby way in which the province's best — and best-known — artist has been treated.

Although the government of B.C. has one of the largest collections of Emily Carr oils and watercolors, next to the Vancouver art gallery, they are rarely on public view. Instead they are squirrelled away — somewhere safe we hope — among dusty tomes and dockets of colonial correspondence.

Apparently the archives didn't even know this watercolor, which turned up in Sidney last week, was missing — such is the organized inventory system of the repository of British Columbia's heritage.

Once in a while the Emily Carrs will surface, on the menus of state dinners provided by the provincial government for various dignitaries, on a postage stamp honoring Miss Carr's work. The last comprehensive public showing of her works was a decade ago.

She deserves better than that. In the early 1960s, there was talk of establishing a special Emily Carr gallery to house her works. In this era of three billion dollar budgets, perhaps the province could spare a few thousand to set aside a room somewhere in the large museum-archives complex where the public might view her paintings.

HAROLD GREER

Ontario 'Traitors' and Yahoos

TORONTO — A traitor is one who commits treason, and treason is defined in the criminal code of Canada as the use of force or violence or intent to use force for the purpose of overthrowing a Canadian government, federal or provincial. It is a definition worth remembering in what follows.

Rene Leyesque, the leader of the Parti Quebecois, advocates the separation of Quebec from Canada by peaceful and parliamentary means. He has never advocated, but has repeatedly disavowed, force, violence and revolution as methods to achieve separatism.

Canadian democracy permits — indeed, cherishes — free speech, free assembly, free opinion, within very broad political limits. It is therefore not only permissible but fundamental that one may seek the separation of Quebec by peaceful means, without being charged, legally or politically, with treason. It is a philosophy worth remembering in what follows.

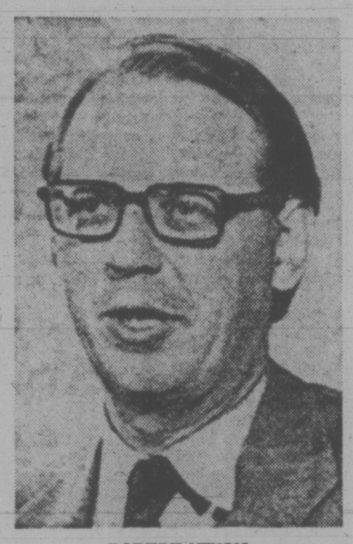
Reasonable Person

On April 1, Rene Levesque and Ontario Liberal leader Robert Nixon shared a platform at a businessmen's convention in Toronto. Anyone who has seen Levesque on such occasions cannot help but be impressed, however much one may disagree with him. He is a brilliant dialectician and a very witty, charismatic fellow.

Indeed, Nixon's comment, that he gets uneasy about Confederation when he sees "such a reasonable person putting forward the separatist idea so strongly," was an eminently sensible one and no doubt sums up the reaction of many who have seen Levesque in action.

On April 7, John White, former treasurer of Ontario and now a minister without portfolio in anticipation of his retirement come the next election, wound up for the government in the throne speech debate in the Ontario legislature. Hansard records he began as follows:

"Mr. Speaker, the Webster dictionary defines the word traitor as one who betrays his country by violating his allegiance, and allegiance is defined as a duty owed to one's state. The Oxford dictionary defines the word traitor as one who violates his allegiance or acts disloyally to his country. By these definitions, sir, Rene Levesque is a traitor.



ROBERT NIXON
... a traitor to Ontario?

"Any citizen of a country who would assist internal or external forces to destroy that country must be considered a traitor. George Drew would have called him a traitor ... Leslie Frost would have called him a traitor, as indeed he is, and so would Bill Davis.

"The leader of the opposition (Robert Nixon), who aspires to be the premier of this province, calls Rene Levesque a reasonable man ... and that, I think, Mr. Speaker, illustrates in a nutshell why the leader of the Liberal party here will never be the premier of Ontario. Because one can't be that accommodating to the forces that attempt to destroy your nation ..."

There was more, much more, but the legislature was in an uproar by this time and Hansard gets incoherent. The above gives the sickening flavor. It was the classic McCarthy smear. First the setting up of an inaccurate and unfair premise, then the deliberate distortion of what was said, and finally the guilt by association, all for the purpose of making Robert Nixon appear to be soft on separatism, if not soft on treason.

A cheap political shot, thrown out in the heat of political debate? Not at all. White planned it, consulted dictionaries, prepared notes. He started off his speech with it. Nobody provoked him into it by interjections.

Nasty Streak

A transitory aberration, of no permanent significance? I do not think so. Rather it is another piece of evidence that there has developed in the Ontario Conservative party after 32 years in power a mean, nasty yahoo streak which erupts whenever it feels its divine right to rule is threatened.

Every political party has its rednecks, hardhats and yahoos who manage to get elected despite the axiom that moderation and compromise are the characteristics of the successful politician. But the Ontario Conservative party has more than its share, partly because it is an easy slide from conservatism to reaction to extremism, but largely because the party leaders, to put it mildly, do not discourage it. They apparently find yahoos useful.

Before White entered the cabinet, he was known as the Tory hatchet-man and yahooed with the best of them. With his retirement from ministerial responsibilities, he is apparently reverting to form. John White, not so incidentally, has been designated Conservative campaign chairman for the election. It looks like a dirty campaign.

Silly Suggestion

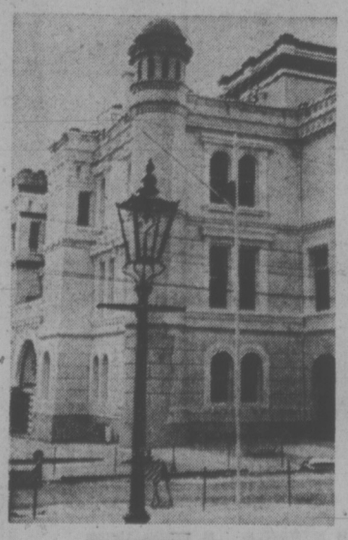
The proposal by Ald. Sam Bawlf that the maritime museum of B.C. be housed in the Princess Marguerite to commute between Victoria and Seattle implies that he does not know what a museum is for. One has the impression that he thinks that its function to be the amusement of the casual visitor passing an idle hour.

The Oxford shorter dictionary defines a museum as "a building or apartment dedicated to the pursuit of learning, a study, a library. 2. A building used for storing and exhibiting objects illustrative of antiquities, natural history, art, etc." The maritime museum fits this definition and, perhaps, Bawlf would concede that it would be difficult for a person to pursue learning when he must first catch its perepatetic house.

The museum has many more visitors than those who travel between Victoria and Seattle, including local residents, and to limit these people's visits to brief periods when the museum was in Victoria would be to defeat the establishment's purpose.

Placing the museum in a ferry would create many technical problems. To understand only one of them, consider the staff. Museum workers, like others, have homes they like to live in with families and among friends with whom they share common interests. It would be difficult to recruit and retain competent staff members prepared to spend most of their summers at sea and in Seattle.

The contents of the museum's files, the gifts of objects for display and the exhibitions that it has housed, is housing and has arranged to house, disclose that it is held in high regard both nationally and internationally. When it is remembered that, since it left the shelter of the navy's wing, in 1965, the maritime museum has been financially starved, grossly understaffed and periodically assaulted by public figures from whom it should receive support, is it not astonishing that it has attained its reputation under the guidance of a director who, to quote Bawlf from the Times of April 17, "displays a lack of imagination and perspective?"—F. E. Grubb, Registrar, Maritime Museum of B.C.



MARITIME MUSEUM
... absurd to put it on Marguerite

Gallic Shrug

We — the Public — are in a quandary! Caught between the battle lines of labor and management and at the mercy of an incapable government in Ottawa, we are putting up with lack of proper services and filth with consequent imminent danger to health. We are the recipients of increased taxation and higher prices due to complete governmental irresponsibility.

Ottawa lacks a statesman to lead the government, the responsibility being carelessly left to a playboy and similar ilk, ignorant of values simply because they have never had to earn their keep. Our answer to questions is the typical and tiresome Gallic shrug.

In spite of cynicism and promises to practise restraint, they have finally completed the insult by increasing their pay, and it is retroactive! Business, management and labor are all blamed for their lack of restraint and curbs!

Thus unions are ignoring government requests and pursue a course of demands often beyond reason, ultimately increasing costs in all directions. Like the government, unions also demonstrate a lack of full responsibility. They demand higher wages but offer nothing in return. Should they not at least offer to try to increase quantity and quality of production? Could they not offer better discipline to reduce the stolen hours by lazy workmen and for which they receive the increased pay cheque?

One hope remains. If unions and labor are as sincere and loyal as they make it appear, they will join together to hold back on all increases for a period of 12 months. Then, immediately, place the responsibility of inflation squarely where it belongs — in Ottawa — with the statement, "Now we are holding, now you do the job for which you were elected, both for us and all Canadians who lack aggressive representation." — R. Grant, 130-645 Fort Street.

Tax Alcohol

If anyone should want for a reason for turning these godless socialists out of office let him examine the most recent statistics showing the breakdown of the components of the Consumer Price Index (CPI) for the past few years.

I was shocked and dismayed to learn that the overall CPI had risen from an average of 127.0 in 1971 to 157.4 in 1974 while the tobacco and alcohol component had only risen from 120.5 to 133.8 in the same period, a smaller increase than any other component in the index!

This government's failure to tax these two plagues of our society at prohibitive rates is certain evidence of pandering to the grossest instincts of the voting public and constitutes a most flagrant and hypocritical betrayal of the ideals they publicly espouse. Certainly Mr. Bennett's lamented government did not lack the courage of its convictions in this regard.

The Times will be remiss in its civic responsibility if it fails to protest in its most strident tones the government's failure to raise taxes on alcohol and tobacco and if it fails to serve as a megaphone for the voices in our society which speak for temperance, morality, and community health, welfare, and safety. — Upset, Victoria.

Dangerous Plants

In the Times of Oct. 5, 1970, Dr. Walter Alvarez warned that the leaves of celery, rhubarb, peach, tomato and potato are poisonous. Apple seeds in large quantities are also dangerous.

In the book Daffodils Are Dangerous, the poisonous plants in your garden, Hubert Creekmore states children should be guarded against tasting plants like: locust, bleeding heart, castor beans, Christmas rose, daphne, English ivy, foxglove, laburnum, delphinium, glory lily, tiger lily pollen, hyacinths, squills, tulips, lily of the valley (juice from a bouquet in water can kill a child), laurel and rhododendron, narcissus, daffodil, jonquil, oleander, snow-on-the-mountain (used in Texas instead of branding iron to mark skin of stock), garden nicotine, English yew (killed many men and animals), Japanese yew (bad and West Coast yew under suspicion), holly and mistletoe berries, four-o'clock plants, roots, and seeds, wisteria pods and seeds, lupine pods and seeds, common sweet pea stems have caused paralysis in bed for months.

All of above are old favorites and so familiar that we tend to forget about the danger in them. — For Safety First.

60 YEARS AGO

From the Times of April 23, 1915

The first bishop of the Reformed Episcopal Church in Canada arrived in Victoria yesterday afternoon. Bishop Willard Brewing, who was consecrated into the office last June, has taken charge of the jurisdiction formerly presided over by Bishop Fallows of Chicago, the presiding bishop of the Reformed Episcopal Church in America. Bishop Brewing has just completed a transcontinental tour, coming to the coast from Toronto, where he is rector of Christ. His diocese, which embraces the whole of Canada, is a vast one and a tour of it necessarily takes many weeks. This is the first time Bishop Brewing has been out to the coast and he is unrestrained in expressions of admiration for the beautiful scenery and climate.

End of 'Pactomania' For U.S. in Vietnam

By JAMES EAYRS

"When the news was brought to Athens the Athenians for a long time could not believe . . . When the conviction was forced upon them, they were angry with the politicians who had joined in promoting the expedition, just as if they had not themselves voted for it, and were enraged with the reciters of oracles and soothsayers, and all other omen-mongers of the time who had encouraged them to hope that they would conquer Sicily."

Thucydides, c. 411 B.C.

American policy for South-East Asia is moving swiftly and inexorably towards collapse and final failure. No one is denying it any more. There is only a chorus of recrimination, over which the voices of President Gerald Ford ("It just makes me sick") and his Secretary of State ("We shall not forget who supplied the arms which North Vietnam used") are heard as moans of desolation.

It is urged that now is a time for silence. "Clio, the goddess of history, is cool and slow and elusive in her ways" — so a New York Times editorial mused the other day. "She cannot be coerced to speak the lines of any participant in this battle when blood still stains the ground and screams are everywhere. Only later, much later, can history begin to make an assessment of the mixture of good and evil, of wisdom and folly, of ideals and illusions in the long Vietnam story."

That may seem like good advice. But there are three things wrong with it.

Later Is Too Late

First, "History" assesses nothing, speaks the lines of no one. There is no such thing as the judgment of history. There are only the judgments of historians, who have a bounden duty to render them — on or off demand.

Second, "later" — let alone "much later" — is too late. By then evidence will have been destroyed, myths accumulated, events disappeared into the mists. "Never put off to tomorrow what you can do today" is an adage historians do well to heed. The greatest of them understood the need. "Thucydides, an Athenian, wrote the history of the war between the Peloponesians and the Athenians," he records of himself in its opening sentence, and adds: "He began at the moment that it broke out."

Finally, in the case of the collapse of American foreign policy in South-East Asia there is no reason to delay judgments or suspend verdicts. What brought it about is plain for all to see. It is the wreak of pactomania.

"Pactomania" was a term coined by critics of a former U.S. Secretary of State, the late John Foster Dulles. They employed it to describe and deride that disorder of diplomacy the symptom of which is the delusion that any ally is better than no ally and that most allies is best of all.

Dulles' diplomacy displayed that disorder in its most acute form. His message to governments around the world was simple and direct: "Hurry on down to my house, baby." And they did.

He collected allies for America like some looney lepidopterist collects butterflies and moths. In a speech delivered at the zenith of his career in June 1956 — one month before President Nasser of Egypt wrecked it — Dulles looked over his collection with a collector's loving eye. "Within the last ten years," he boasted, "the United States has made treaties with 42 countries of America, Europe and Asia."

These allies were believed to contribute more than physical strength to American power — whether as spear-carriers for the U.S. Army or bomber bases for the U.S. Air Force. They were weapons in a war of nerves, tools of psychological warfare. It was as if Dulles saw the world as a gigantic atlas. Communist countries were colored red. He would check their spread by coloring the countries on their peripheries a reassuring green or blue, using that Magic Marker of American diplomacy — the U.S. Mutual Defence Agreement.

As power grew less and less calculable, as the need for overseas bases diminished, as Cold War thawed into detente, the worth of such allies began to be called into question.

Second-Class Allies

The proliferation of defence pacts, the critics argued, was self-defeating. Their effect in the long run would be to cheapen the value of an American commitment, erode confidence in an American promise. If any country could become an ally of the United States just for the asking, what was the point in asking. The heedless scattering of American alliances about the globe by these Johnny Appleseeds of diplomacy would only imperil the truly serious enterprises on which U.S. foreign policy was engaged — such as the containment of the Red Army behind its Eastern European borders.

The critics were for the most part old State Department hands. Their warnings were blunt and to the point.

Here is Charles Burton Marshall: "An ability to establish hierarchies of importance among external entities and situations is the most basic element of prudence in foreign policy. If there could not be first-class and second-class allies, then obviously there could only be second-class allies."

Here is George Kennan: "As a circle of military associates widens, the theoretical total of available military strength may increase, but only at the cost of compactness and ease of control. And the wider a coalition becomes, the more difficult it becomes to retain political unity and general agreement on the purposes and effects of what is being done."

And here is J. K. Galbraith: "Machiavelli warned weak princes against joining with small states. In my forthcoming revision of his work, I will warn all strong states against weak ones. Since weak states are weak the strong state gets no added strength out of its alliance. But the weak state can use its strong ally for its own purposes . . . to these the large state becomes a party and such is our present fate."

Such as the ravages of pactomania — so keenly diagnosed, so poorly treated. Has the disease now run its course? Something that Secretary Kissinger said last week makes one hope the worst has passed. "One lesson we must surely learn from Vietnam is that new commitments of our nation's honor and prestige must be carefully weighed." Never has the cost of tuition in the obvious been higher.

Soviet Big Gainer in Southeast Asia

By DEV MURARKA
London Observer

MOSCOW — The Russians are not gloating, but are none the less extremely pleased with the way things are going in Vietnam and Cambodia. This is not because the Americans are being deservedly ousted from Indo-China. It is because Moscow calculates that Hanoi's victory will be more likely to contribute to increased Soviet influence at the expense of China.

The exit of the Americans does not mean that struggle for power and influence is over in Indo-China. On the contrary, it may just be the beginning of a new phase. It was postponed for so long because of the distorting fact of the American presence. Now, it will assume its natural form. Hence the question now is, who will be the real players in the game?

According to Soviet experts, the number one player is Hanoi. With victory in South Vietnam and with a strong influence upon the Khmer Rouge leaders in Cambodia, plus considerable influence in Laos, the North Vietnamese are in a dominating position. Even though, in the years ahead, they would be primarily preoccupied with the problems of reconstruction and domestic organization, they are unlikely to cease their vigil against outside influence of any challenging nature.

Historically, too, the Indo-Chinese have been afraid of one country more than any other — China. And now that the Americans are nearly gone and unlikely to return soon in a direct manner, this fear of China will revive. Correspondingly, Hanoi will be more and more interested in using the Soviet Union as a counterweight to Peking — a role Moscow is willing to perform.

Soviet experts warn that it will not come about immediately. After all, the Chinese are still helping the Indo-Chinese in their strugle against regimes set up by the Americans. Even when the American presence was there, Peking provided some aid and very loud moral support for the Indo-Chinese.

But, the Soviet analysts point out that Hanoi, Phnom Penh and Vientiane will not now need to be so dependent on China. Rather, it is more than likely that Washington will work through China to regain some influence in Indo-China. Thus, Hanoi has now more to fear from China than anyone else.

But there are other reasons why Hanoi would want to keep the Chinese at a distance. The foremost is that any increase of Chinese influence in the region can only be at the expense of Hanoi. Having just won a famous victory against a super-power, Hanoi is not going to miss this opportunity to consolidate its own power. It is interesting in this context that, apart from making routine comments, Peking has not displayed any great pleasure at the success of the NLF in South Vietnam.

But Peking has been a bit more enthusiastic about the Khmers Rouges in Cambodia. And Cambodia does present a problem for Moscow. In the first place Moscow has behaved rather stupidly in Cambodia. Because Sihanouk established himself in exile in Peking and allied himself with the Chinese after his overthrow by the Americans, the Russians took umbrage. Their obsession with China is so great that they failed to see the inevitability of the victory of the pro-Sihanouk forces in Cambodia and insisted on maintaining relations with the Lon Nol regime. This spoiled their relations with Sihanouk as well as the Khmers Rouges and only now have they finally recognized the Sihanouk government-in-exile. But it will take Moscow a long time to recover from this mistake, if it ever does.

Another factor is the Cambodians' own fear of the Vietnamese. They want to keep China away but they would like to keep Hanoi equally at a distance and this may incline them to play the Chinese off against Hanoi. In this game, Moscow would not stand much of a chance unless Hanoi decided to help compete with China. Still, the Russians are good at adapting themselves to this kind of change in perspective and may establish good relations with the new leaders of Cambodia, irrespective of Sihanouk who may well be only the titular leader.

Altogether Moscow has every reason to view with optimism the perspective for its own influence in South-East Asia. In the process, the Soviet Union will undoubtedly play upon the anti-Peking feelings not only of the Indo-Chinese as a whole but also of other South-East Asian countries like Indonesia, Thailand and the Philippines. With Hanoi as an ally, Moscow will have a better chance of meeting the Chinese on an equal footing in the region.

JAPAN SOCIAL CONTRACT?

By MARK FRANKLAND
London Observer

TOKYO — Japanese industry and labor are manoeuvring towards an important compromise on wage increases aimed at cutting back inflation and maintaining the competitiveness of Japan's exports.

The first significant step towards the deal came late last month when last-minute government concessions averted a 24-hour national rail strike. This strike was supposed to start labor's annual "spring struggle" with a bang—and considerable discomfort to the public at large.

If the deal does come off, much of the credit must go to Prime Minister Takeo Miki, the leading (and often uncomfortably isolated) dove in the Liberal Democratic (conservative) Party. He softened the would-be strikers by promising to postpone punishment of workers in public service unions (including the national railways) who went on strike in the past 12 months. Under a law dear to Japanese conservatives, strikes by public service workers are illegal and punishable by fines, suspension and even dismissal.

Unions have long fought to change the law, and it seems that, with Miki, they at last have a chance. The prime minister also undertook to examine the idea of a national minimum wage, which is of vital importance to the two-thirds of Japan's labor force that is not unionised.

Warmed by Miki's obvious interest in conciliation, rather than confrontation, employers and unions now have a better chance of agreeing on a Japanese-style social contract that reflects the interests of both sides of industry.

Labor and management face a situation similar to that of most western nations: a severe recession, with zero growth and the prospect of only moderate expansion in the foreseeable future. There are nearly one million officially unemployed (two per cent of the labor force), and over two million part-time and seasonal workers who cannot find jobs.

Official statistics also ignore more than 250,000 workers put on temporary paid leave by their companies; nor do they include the many older workers who have been asked by employers to retire prematurely "for the good of the firm."

A woman employee who had worked in a company for 20 years recently described in a letter to a newspaper how one day its president called for mass resignations to avert bankruptcy. The president, she wrote pityingly, "seemed more grey-haired than usual, hollow-cheeked and more tired."

It was a difficult decision, she said, but "I have finally decided to quit because I love my company." Many Japanese unionists find such attitudes as deplorable as would their counterparts anywhere else.

But their enthusiasm for big wage increases is being tempered by three things:

- Bigger pay packets are useless if there is massive inflation: last year's record increases of more than 30 per cent were neutralized within months by rising prices.
- They are aware of the danger of pushing up costs, so that they no longer compete on the international market. Scratch a union activist and chances are you will still find a patriotic Japanese underneath.
- Their relatively new belief that organized labor must also help the weak and unorganized — chiefly by fighting for improved social welfare measures — is being treated sympathetically by Prime Minister Miki.

Chances are therefore good that unions and employers will, over the next few weeks, agree on wage increases less than half last year's. Company presidents will recover their bloom, employees will again show their love for their firms by working for them, not leaving them. Japan, in other words, will be getting back into business.

Suddenly the Poor Is Us

russell baker

A New York television station recently discovered that college students are taking pornographic-movie roles to work their way through college. It is another instance of hard times changing the country.

The young woman interviewed on camera for this report said it was her way of fighting the recession. Money had become scarce at home. If she was to continue her education she needed work. The pornographic-movie business needs actresses. Thus, two needs had coincided in bad times and now she toils at passion under the camera's eye after a hard day with her Livy and test tubes. Yes, she had talked it over with her mother. Not with her father.

If I had been her father, I would have preferred that she talk it over with me, too, at least before appearing on television to tell the rest of New York that I hadn't been consulted. I would have counseled against it and suggested that she try waiting on tables, instead, as college students used to do in depressions of yore.

This doubtless betrays a last-century social attitude on my part and, what is worse, an ignorance of the true state of the job market. Jobs waiting on tables these days, for all I know, may require a 10-year apprenticeship in the waiters' union.

In any case, the young woman has made an interesting adaptation to economic reality. If her producer, who was also interviewed, can be believed, other college students are also working their way through school by simulating ecstasy. Who knows? Pornographic movies could be the biggest boom to education since the football scholarship.

About the same time this report appeared on television, a middle-aged, middle-class father of nine children published on the Op-Ed Page of The New York Times a poignant description of the desperation of being out of work for the first time in his life with no prospects of employment.

It was hard to read that piece without a private interior shudder of fear. Mortgage-payment time running out, savings gone, unpayable insurance premiums coming due, duns from the grocer, anxiety in the children's faces, scowls at the bank, no replies to job applications mailed around the country. One felt nothing but sympathy and the horror of recognition. He was not one of them, the shiftless poor we have been hearing about all these years; but one of us, middle-income, soundly insured, patriotically mortgaged, heavily familied, a man obviously dedicated throughout his life to the work ethic.

A few months ago, Americans applauded President Nixon's suggestion that people on the dole, if they had any spirit, would prefer carrying bedpans to accepting government money. The attitude widely held was that poorness bespoke of despicable lack of character rather than an absence of work.

How many Americans would advance that proposition now to the father of nine who suddenly can't meet his mortgage payments? Not many of us, I suspect, would tell him he ought to be carrying bedpans instead of collecting unemployment compensation. Very few would think it amusing to suggest that he do as the college students do and take up pornographic stardom.

It is not very satisfying being either witty or pious when the joke or the sermon is incoming artillery falling near your own trenches. Most of us do not want to carry bedpans or even act in pornographic films, and the reason, I fear, is an excess of last-century pride, shameful, even sinful, though it may be.

For a long time, however, many of us were accustomed to scourge miserable people with piety, wit and abuse and to give our votes to politicians who assured us it was noble to do so, for we were flogging the wretches out of their sinful sloth. The people to whom we gave the benefit of our abuse, of course, were not us. Not us at all. They were them. They were people for whom there had been no prideful work for so long that many of them could not conceive of its existence.

Now, suddenly it is us that we are talking about. When you visit the man next door who has been six months out of work and lecture him about the work ethic, he will take you for a fool, which is probably the accurate way to take you if you are sincere in your lecture.

Where there is no work, talk about the work ethic turns out to be non-negotiable at the grocery counter. People who have been out of work all their lives must have always known this when we were telling them about the spiritual rewards of bedpans. No wonder they have written us off as hopeless fools fit only to be pillaged for wallets and silverware by their more intemperate young.

If the recession is forcing us to admit that poverty results from an absence of jobs instead of spiritual deficiency, the country may make a beneficial adaptation to hard times and start asking whether an economic order that requires so many people to choose between bedpans and the dole all their lives is as close to perfection as it is cracked up to be.

Marchand Widens Probe of Air Canada

OTTAWA (CP) — Mr. Justice Willard Estey of the Ontario Supreme Court appeal division was named Tuesday to conduct a one-man inquiry into Air Canada that Transport Minister Jean Marchand said likely will be open to the public.

Marchand told the Commons the inquiry might also examine a possible conflict of interest involving purchase of a Barbados villa by former Air Canada vice-president Yves Menard as well as a $100,000 payment to a Montreal travel agency. Menard, who authorized the $100,000 deal with travel agent R. Y. McGregor, recently resigned after allegations that he bought the villa with arrangements made later by the airline to use it as a tourist resort.

Outside the House, Marchand said Mr. Justice Estey may also look at "the whole financial structure of the organization to see if we have all the control we need" over Air Canada spending.

Mr. Justice Estey will be in Ottawa Thursday to discuss proposed terms of reference for the inquiry.

If he thinks he needs more power to conduct the examination he will get them, said Marchand.

Marchand said he also wants to see if there are ways to get back the $100,000.

The probe would also determine if management of Air Canada acted promptly once it found out what had happened.

Air Canada chairman Yves Pratte found out about the $100,000 deal last month but did not inform the government while he awaited results of an internal investigation, Marchand said Friday.

However, Marchand added that there was no indication of any wrongdoing by Pratte and his job was not in jeopardy "at this moment."

The $100,000 was promised McGregor last November, in documents signed by Menard, in return for the travel agent influencing Middle Eastern and Latin American governments in favor of Air Canada.

Pratte has refused comment on reports that Menard said the airline chairman discussed the deal with him before the final agreement.

'A Party To Murder'

OTTAWA (CP) — Relaxed abortion laws, passed in 1969, make the government a party to wanton murder, Jake Epp (PC-Provencher) said Tuesday night.

Fetuses up to five months old, some capable of living outside the womb, are being aborted as a result of the legal changes, he said in the Commons.

"The government has become part and parcel of what I would call wanton murder."

CAUTIOUS COMMONS NOD IN SUPPORT OF SEX

OTTAWA (FP) — The House of Commons thinks sex is okay. Acting Prime Minister Mitchell Sharp made that point Tuesday in response to a question that aroused gales of laughter and applause.

Peter Elzinga, an Alberta Tory, sought information about remarks an official of the federal health and welfare department had "made recently in a discussion."

Elzinga quoted the unnamed official as stating: "Publications were put into what is called Generation, a package of information distributed to high school and university students giving them full information on what the problems are . . . At present we have an advisory committee, a working group that is doing a special study on how to go into new ways of trying to convince people such things as, — 'Sex is okay, but VD is out'."

The MP said he was concerned about the statement.

There were outbreaks of laughter and chuckles all over the chamber.

He asked if it is the government's policy to convey to high school students that sex is okay but veneral disease is out.

Amid the laughter and considerable heckling Sharp rose red-faced to reply, groping for an answer. Finally he said, "I must say I find some support in the House for the first part of the statement."

He quickly resumed his seat and Speaker James Jerome called for another question changing the subject to restore order.

5-Year Parks Push

OTTAWA (CP) — Facilities and services in national parks have deteriorated in the last few years and Parks Canada has embarked on a five-year program to correct the situation, the Commons parks committee learned Tuesday.

In a background paper distributed to MPs, Parks Canada said capital resources which normally would have been used to expand programs in existing parks have gone into expansion of new parks.

"This shortage of funds has resulted in a deterioration in facilities and a drop in the level of services we have been able to provide," said Parks Canada.

"This has tended to leave many of the parks, such as Prince Albert, St. Lawrence Islands and Mount Revelstoke, with less than adequate facilities," conceded the agnecy, a part of the Indian and northern affairs department.

Compounding the problem is the ever-increasing popularity of the parks. Visitors last year were estimated at 18 million, an increase of six million over 1970.

"It may be necessary to slow down the growth of national parks system so that urgently-required funds can be diverted from a heavily-oriented capital program related to park expansion to the refurbishment of facilities to establish parks," it said.

"Our five-year program approved by treasury board plans to do that."

The paper also conceded that plans for a huge ski operation at Lake Louise a few years ago "was too large and some of the concerns raised were legitimate."

Public outcry against the development lead then parks minister Jean Chretien to veto the project.

SPLIT URGED

OTTAWA (CP) — Workers with essential jobs should not be in the same bargaining units as non-essential employees, Robert McCleave (PC — Halifax-East Hants) said Tuesday night.

There is a psychological barrier that prevents essential workers from crossing picket lines of fellow employees, he said in the Commons.

"They feel they have to be one with their fellow workers."

Probe Looming On Rising Crime

Times News Services

OTTAWA — A federal-provincial conference on urban crime is expected within the next 12 months as crime rates continue to increase.

Solicitor-General Warren Allmand told the Commons justice and legal affairs committee Tuesday that the scope and topics of such a conference are being discussed.

He mentioned drug trafficking, loan sharking, gambling and commercial crime as areas of discussion.

Allmand also said Tuesday he hopes to have a bill to replace the Juvenile Delinquency Act before Parliament within a year.

He may be able to unveil a "model act" by June, he told the committee.

It would include a summary of issues involved when juveniles are in conflict with the law, the options for dealing with them, and the basis for the proposals.

The committee was told that studies are under way in Allmand's department, including one on gun controls and another on causes of violence.

James McGrath raised the subject of "media violence" and said the U.S. surgeon-general has linked it to increases in violent crime.

B.C. Hofley, assistant deputy minister in charge of research and systems development, replied that the surgeon-general's report deals with the U.S.

"Yes," said McGrath, "but they are American programs we're getting in Canada."

Hofley said recommendations are expected shortly on the issue of media violence but it i a difficult area "be-but it is a difficult area "because you are getting into questions of censorship."

The committee will get fully into the issue of rising crime later this week.

Allmand said the five-year RCMP crime rate is averaging an 8.7 per cent increase compared to 7.7 per cent a year ago.

ALLMAND'S EYES ONLY

OTTAWA (FP) — Solicitor General Warren Allmand told the commons Tuesday he was the only member of the cabinet who has seen the RCMP report clearing MPs of any wrong doing in connection with the Seafarers' International Union.

Neither Prime Minister Trudeau nor any other member of the cabinet had been shown the report, he said.

Urged again to make the report public, he said he was "looking at the possibility of releasing the conclusions and the terms of reference of certain parts of the report."

"I am studying that right now," he added.

Jail Pot Users, Gregory Urges

Times News Services

OTTAWA — The Canadian Association of Chiefs of Police called Tuesday for the jailing of all but first-time marijuana and hashish offenders.

Speaking before a Senate committee, Chief J. F. Gregory of Victoria, association president siad marijuana and hashish users who have not learned from their first offence must be removed from society "so they do not infect" others.

However, he seemed to run into resistance from senators to his call for incarceration.

Chief Gregory objected when Senator David Croll called marijuana a "recreational drug." It was not, the chief said; it was a "dangerous drug."

"I've seen it smoked" and the youngsters who were smoking it seemed to get some fun out of it, the senator said.

The Canadian Bar Association, meanwhile, suggested ways to get around the problem of lifting the burden of a criminal record from persons convicted of simple possession of cannabis drugs for the first time.

Gregg Brodsky of Winnipeg, chairman of the Bar's criminal justice section, told the committee that use of absolute or conditional discharge, which results in no record of conviction, would achieve the effect.

Entry of an offence following a second conviction might be sufficient deterrent, Brodsky said.

Davey Eyeing Curbs On Newspaper Chains

OTTAWA (CP) — Newspaper ownership has become so concentrated that the government "may have to consider dismantling some of the chains," Senator Keith Davey said Tuesday.

"The extent of concentration of ownership of newspapers is so total any legislation to restrict takeovers would be punitive against the few remaining independent guys," Senator Davey said in an interview.

"It is probably too late" to set up a media review agency to decide on proposed takeovers as recommended in his Senate committee report on the mass media, he added.

When asked whether he has grown more pessimistic about the state of the media since the report's release in 1971, he said: "Yes and no."

"CBC radio is outstanding and some newspapers are trying to imporve. We said most of them were mediocre and most of them still are."

His comments followed announcement of the sale of Sault Ste. Marie Ont. Daily Star to Southam Press Ltd. The newspaper had been family-owned for 74 years.

The sale was "just more of the same," he said.

No Plan Yet on Columbia River Probe

Resources Minister Bob Williams said Tuesday the cabinet has still not determined what form an inquiry into the Columbia River Treaty will take.

But he reiterated his promise that the inquiry will be held and "the public will get all the facts, finally."

Liberal MLA Pat McGeer (Vancouver-Point Grey) asked Williams if his promise was serious or simply "another attempt to evade the issue."

He suggested Williams was just waiting for debate of his estimates to finish so he could remain silent and never have to announce the appointment of the inquiry, or respond to charges being made about him.

McGeer said it was time Williams responded to charges made against him by former B.C. Hydro co-chairman Hugh Keenleyside, who said the minister was deliberately misleading the public and the legislature when he said a Hydro committee in 1967 juggled Columbia River treaty costs.

Keenleyside made the statement at a press conference in February and his statement is included in a pamphlet being sent to various people in B.C. by an anonymous group of Keenleyside's friends.

The Liberal said Williams has a responsibility to either deny Keenleyside's accusation or to admit that the accusation is correct.

"The minister has been accused of lying, in print, in a public document," said McGeer, and he should answer those accusations unless "he's afraid to answer them."

Williams said he had no reason to respond to the statements made by Keenleyside, "an old man and his memoirs," and he would not comment further than to repeat his promise of an inquiry.

Healthy Future Seen in Lumber

The B.C. lumber industry can look forward to a healthier economy by the third quarter of this year, Resources Minister Bob Williams predicted Tuesday.

He said the industry is already experiencing an upswing and improvements in the economy can be expected by the more efficient mills by that time.

"The slump seems to have bottomed out," he told the legislature during debate of his departments $140 million estimates.

The pulp industry, he said, is resting on a plateau, but the industry also can anticipate improvement.

In response to opposition criticism that independent sawmills are experiencing difficulty in selling wood chips, Williams said his department will "certainly look at" allowing independents export agreements to ease the volume of chips bottlenecked in B.C.

"I'm not saying we will look at anything beyond medium export terms. The longer term goal is seeing that the products are used in the provnice to create employment," he said.

Tory Leader Scott Wallace had suggested that a royal commission into the forest industry be established.

But Williams said once terms of reference are decided the government's environment resource committee will deal with forest industry problems.

Socred MLAs Alex Fraser (Cariboo) and Jim Chabot (Columbia) criticized the minister for allowing a serious over-supply of wood chips.

Chabot charged that at least one sawmill is burying $25,000 worth of chips per month because of the poor market.

Pulp mills, he said, are using round wood as an alternative because of the expensive price of chips at $35 a bone dry unit. He asked if Williams is considering allowing the price to drop.

But the minister refused to consider a cut in wood chip prices.

"We're looking at the export option," he said.

Liberal MLA Allan Williams (West Vancouver-Howe Sound) rejected the minister's statement that the slumping forest industry is caused only by the significant drop in housing starts in the U.S.

He said the minister should be criticized for failing to assess the dangers ahead for the industry.

Hiring Policy Slammed

The provincial government has departed from its long-established rule of equal opportunity and non-discrimination in hiring, Liberal leader David Anderson charged Tuesday.

The Human Rights Commission has allowed the government to waive a section of the Human Rights Code guaranteeing equality of opportunity in employment for its summer student employment program, said Anderson.

Preference in hiring for the summer program will be given mentally or physically disadvantaged students, Indian students, potential dropouts, female students, high school students and first-time entrants into the summer labor force.

Anderson said there may be legitimate reasons for establishing the preference system but he said it is a clear departure from established government hiring practices and the matter should be fully debated in the legislature.

The Human Rights Code does allow for a waiving of the equal opportunity provision in certain cases in order to assist historically disadvantaged groups.

Anderson said the labor department applied to the commission for a waiving of that section and it was granted.

Also Tuesday, Socred MLa Harvey Schroeder (Chilliwack) tabled a petition from a Nelson student protesting the government's cutback in this year's summer employment program.

Andy Shadrack, president of the Notre Dame University Student Union, urged the government not to cut down on funds for the Work in Government program.

The petition, signed by 386 people, noted that students wishing to apply for student loans next year must have earned $600 during the summer and any reduction in the employment program will mean more students will not be able to attend university next year.

Independent Fishermen of B.C.

To protect your family and your income Independent Operator's Coverage is available to you under the Workers' Compensation Act.

Benefits
- Compensation for loss of earnings while disabled by work injuries. (Payments are based on 75% of earnings evaluated by fishermen on application form for coverage.)
- All medical, hospital, nursing and drug expenses resulting from work injuries.
- Pensions for permanent disability resulting from work injuries.
- Physical and other rehabilitation services.

In the case of a fatal work injury, an immediate allowance is available to dependent widows in addition to funeral and burial expenses. These benefits, along with pensions for dependent widows and children, are subject to adjustment each April and October according to changes in the Consumer Price Index.

Cost to you
- 3% of your evaluated earnings up to $12,100.00 per year.
- Minimum cost for full year's coverage $153.00.
- Maximum cost for full year's coverage $363.00.
- Minimum cost for temporary coverage $15.00.

How to get coverage
Independent fishermen should apply to the WCB well in advance of the date for which coverage is desired. Coverage is not effective until the completed application and payment are accepted by a WCB Office. For further information contact your nearest union office, nearest fishing company or the Workers' Compensation Board.

More than 2,500 independent fishermen in B.C. purchased Workers' Compensation Protection in 1974.

Seventh Vacant Building

A partially empty building in Esquimalt is the latest addition to Opposition leader Bill Bennett's list of buildings rented by the government and now lying vacant.

Bennett told the legislature Tuesday the government leased 15,000 square feet of space at 929 Ellery St. for a 10-year period on July 1, 1974.

Nearly 10 months and $35,000 in rent later, said Bennett, the building is still vacant.

A spokesman for Pemberton Holmes Ltd., agents for the building, confirmed Tuesday that the government had leased the building but he said a portion of the building has been occupied for some time while the major area is undergoing renovations.

The building is the seventh on Bennett's list of unoccupied buildings leased by the government.

Public Works Minister Bill Hartley has not answered Bennett's questions in the house about the buildings but he said Tuesday he will give a full report on the allegations Thursday evening when his departmental estimates are debated.

He did say, however, that one of the building locations cited by Bennett last week is actually a parking lot next to a Kentucky Fried Chicken stand.

But Bennett quickly replied outside the house that he had provided the wrong address on King George Highway because the empty building he was referring to had no address on the outside.

He reiterated, however, that the building for the Whalley Mental Health Centre was leased by the government Aug. 1, 1974, for an annual cost of $18,515 a year and it is now vacant. It is at 10679 King George, he said, not 10578 King George.

Bennett said the buildings he knows of now show the government has wasted over $200,000 on rental space which is lying empty.

POLLUTION PERMITS UP

A total of 582 permits was issued by the Pollution Control Board during 1974, an increase of 184 over the previous year, Resources Minister Bob Williams said Tuesday.

He said the board has been "doing a lot more" than during the previous Socred administration with enlarged staff, wider citizen representation and input from the province's universities.

The board launched 14 prosecutions under the Pollution Control Act, a decrease of two from 1973's 16.

"Convictions have gone up two," Williams told the legislature during debate of his department's estimates. He drew attention to the fact that there were no prosecutions during 1970 to 1972.

Debate Limit Stays

Opposition members again appealed to the government Tuesday to lift the 135-hour limit on debate in the legislature on budget spending estimates.

At the start of the afternoon sitting, opposition members used a series of procedural points of order to demand elimination of the time limits, and at 6 p.m. adjournment they tried again to raise the issue.

When the government would not agree to their demands, they voted against regular adjournment and forced a formal vote which the government won easily.

An angry shouting match ensued and opposition MLAs left the house shouting "shame, shame, shame."

The opposition members are opposed to the schedule of debate issued by the government last week to speed up debate but they say they will not be satisfied with a simple withdrawal of the schedule; they want the time limits established in new house rules last year to be removed.

Premier Barrett has told the opposition the government will agree to any schedule for debate they wish but there must be some schedule.

He has promised to consider changing the time limit rules but the government rejected in the legislature Tuesday a formal motion by Liberal Garde Gardom (L—Vancouver-Point Grey) to lift the time limits immediately.

The government called a meeting of party whips Tuesday afternoon to discuss the impasse but NDP whip Colin Gabelmann (North Vancouver-Seymour) said the opposition party whips would not discuss a new schedule.

He said they only discussed lifting the 135-hour limit and so the schedule imposed by the government will continue for the remainder of the 19 sittings left under the time limits unless the opposition changes its stand and brings in their own schedule.

ICBC Report Public Friday

The second annual report of the Insurance Corporation of B.C. will likely be made public Friday.

Transport and Communications Minister Bob Strachan told the legislature Tuesday he expects to have the report ready for presentation to the house by that time.

Opposition leaders in the legislature have been continually questioning Strachan about release of the report, which will cover the first full year of operations under Autoplan.

Curfew Not Legal?

An 11 p.m. curfew for juveniles in Port Coquitlam could be open to challenge in the courts, Attorney-General Alex Macdonald told the legislature Tuesday.

Conservative leader Scott Wallace asked the attorney-general if the curfew bylaw, approved by Port Coquitlam council Monday, was constitutional and if it might infringe on the rights of individuals.

"It may involve constitutional civil libertarian principles where the courts might intervene," said Macdonald.

The bylaw is permitted under section 869 of the Municipal Act but Macdonald said even if it is legal, it is not sensible.

"I think this is a matter of parental responsibility.

"To make the police play a game of cops and robbers with youngsters on the street is a mistake. I think they have more important crime problems in that community and other communities in B.C.," he said.

Macdonald said the constitutionality of the curfew will be looked into but if the bylaw is challenged it will probably be done locally.

The bylaw states that children under the age 16 must be off the streets by 11 p.m. when a fire siren will announce the curfew and parents or guardians who allow their children to habitually contravene the law will be subject to a $5 fine.

MLAs' Icy Barbs

Vancouver Canucks weren't the only losers in that sudden-death cliff-hanger Tuesday night in the Montreal Forum.

While the pucksters were slugging it out the MLAs were also doing combat in the legislature.

After the usuyal sniping at the highways department for potholes, ditching, sholders and paving, Liberal Pat McGeer (Vancouver-Point Grey) commended Highways Minister Graham Lea because the last 1.6 miles of gravel road in his riding had been paved.

Health Minister Dennis Cocke was waiting at the blue line: "You were waiting for the hockey game to finish," he yelled, drawing attention to McGeer's late arrival for the evening sitting.

McGeer denied the allegation and tried to bump back by accusing Cocke of interrupting the business of the legislature by announcing hockey scores.

Meanwhile ... Premier Barrett was too occupied to get into the tussle. With a list of names and a wad of $1 bills in hand, he was circulating among the MLAs desks paying off the $18 he reportedly owed.

West Coast Trollers Settle Strike

WESTPORT ,Wash. (AP) — The West Coast Trollers' Association announced Tuesday a settlement in its strike that has kept fishing boats in port since April 12.

The group consisting of some 500 fishermen from Washington and Oregon accepted an offer for 70 cents a pound for small salmon, 90 cents for medium and $1.07 for large, said Dick Calhoun, president of the local organization.

Calhoun said the agreement represented an increase of 5 per cent over last year's prices.

PHILLIPS

ICBC Complaints Taboo, Socred Charges

The consumer services department office in Prince George refuses to deal with any complaints concerning Autoplan or any other government departments, a Socred MLA charged Tuesday.

Don Phillips (SC-South Peace River) said he has received information from an employee of the branch office citing a wide variety of problems in the operation of the office and its provision of services to people.

The office itself is "extremely plush," he said, and according to the employee, 18 stacking chairs costing $92 each were recently bought from Denmark for a total cost of $1,656.

"Do we need imported chairs?" asked Phillips.

In the legislature, he asked Consumer Services Minister Phyllis Young if any Canadian firms had been asked to bid for the chairs and the minister said she would check out the story.

Phillips said the employee also told him that the office has decided not to handle any complaints about the Insurance Corporation of B.C. or any other government departments or agencies.

Young told the legislature during debate of her estimates that her department would check into any consumer complaints about the government, said Phillips.

The employee told Phillips the Prince George office initially accepted complaints about ICBC, opened files on them and queried the local manager of ICBC.

But the manager refused to reply to the department's queries and finally informed the consumer services people that he did not know how to solve the problems and he would not put anything in writing, said Phillips.

So the office decided not to handle any ICBC complaints or any other complaints about the government, said the employee, because it did not know how to deal with them.

Crusaders Find Charm, Profit In Ancient James Bay Homes

While many of us sit sipping a cool beer and watching television, Bill and Gail McKechnie and some of their young friends relax in the evenings by ripping up floors and smashing in false ceilings.

They hope it may bring them in a little extra cash. But mostly they do it because they hate to see old James Bay die.

The first residential area in Greater Victoria and once the city's fashionable district before the move to Rockland, James Bay is fast becoming a concrete jungle — a maze of streets lined with apartment buildings.

That's where the McKechnies and their friends come in. They are hoping to stop this trend by renovating and restoring some of the finer old houses and thus make them "too good" to demolish.

We strolled together, Bill and I, up Avalon Road from the grand old house he and his wife have just sold, to look at other homes they think are worthy of saving.

"When we moved here two-and-a-half years ago, there were about six or seven of these old houses in James Bay coming down each week," says Bill. "I joined the James Bay Community Association, which was instrumental in getting a large part of James Bay rezoned away from apartments."

ORNAMENTAL FRONT tumbles amid heaps of bricks and workman releases crane hook as house is demolished. It's scenes like this one in James Bay that McKechnie and friends hope to end. (Max Low photos)

Their house — "as far as I can determine it was built in 1885," says Bill — was run down when they bought it. There was a sagging old garage which they tore down, the foundations were gone, the porch was delapidated and most of the front steps were missing.

"The owner hadn't done a thing to it and was holding out for an apartment site on this road, so we had to pay a higher price than usual," explains Bill.

Inside, the house is beautiful now. False ceilings (five feet lower than the original ones) were ripped out in each room, revealing classic mouldings and stained glass windows that go right to the top. Layer after layer of linoleum has been stripped from the floors leaving the original wood. And everywhere Bill and his wife have used period-type wallpaper to lend an authentic touch.

"I did most of the work myself," says Bill. "I got under the house with three hydraulic jacks to fix up the foundations and I repaired the porch and steps. And we did the work inside."

Now McKechnie, a lawyer when he's not knocking down ceilings, is working on another project. He has bought a beautiful old house not far away, which he is turning into an office building.

"Before we did this type of thing, the only people fixing up houses in James Bay were those who put in wallboard partitions and as many kitchens as they could and rented them out," Bill says. "We have tried instead to restore them to the grand old houses they once were."

Around the corner in Huntington Place, improvements made by John Keay and his wife Anne to an old house there are even more obvious.

Keay and his friend Rich Collier, both graduates of the school of architecture at the University of British Columbia, just over a year ago paid $20,000 for the land and $1 for the house, which had been condemned by the city.

Their idea was to "do the house up and sell it." But they did it up so beautifully that now John and Anne can't bear to part with it. And so they've decided to sell their place on Oswego Street (another old house across from Macdonald Park that they've renovated) and move to Huntington Place.

"This place was built in about 1890 and when we got it, it was a real mess," says John.

The transition has been remarkable. Now the attractive house is worth twice, possibly two-and-a-half times what they paid for it. Last year, it won the Hallmark Society Award for the best restoration job on a residential dwelling in Greater Victoria.

"These old houses are charming and have great character and a luxury of space with things like high ceilings, big rooms and fireplaces," John points out. "It's my feeling that if you can go through a house and put it back on the market, then that's a good case for keeping these old homes."

And that's just what McKechnie and Keay and their other friends are trying to do. Whenever they hear of an old place, in an area zoned for apartments, that's likely to be demolished they get together and try to buy it. But the crusading doesn't always work.

We walked back to Avalon Road just in time to see a demolition crane lower a gorgeous ornamental front of an old house to the ground in a cloud of dust.

"That's one we lost," Bill says sadly. "We tried to buy it, tried to save it, but the owner wouldn't listen.

"Oh well, you can't win them all, I guess."

McKechnie points out fine points of home

City Schools Rolling On Catch-Up Project

By SUSAN RUTTAN
Times Staff

Greater Victoria schools are in high gear helping students catch up from the education loss caused by the six-week custodians' strike.

Principals were asked, as soon as schools resumed normal hours two weeks ago, to report to district superintendent Jake Longmore on academic problems caused by the strike, and what is being done about them.

The reports show most schools have already organized special help for students needing it, assistant superintendent Dr. John Wiens said Tuesday, and to foist some great district-wide remedial program on them now would only confuse matters.

"By the look of things they're in great shape," he said.

The custodians and maintenance workers, Local 382 of the Canadian Union of Public Employees, struck Feb. 24, reducing school classes to three hours in the morning for the duration.

Community relations officer Bill Stavdal, who has been studying the principals' reports, said most elementary school principals think any catch-up needed can be done in the normal way.

Youngsters who have fallen behind will be spotted by their teacher and given special help.

"The high school principals are saying help is available for students who want it," Stavdal said.

"The onus is on the students and parents to make sure they get through the year."

Most principals say that students who did their assignments during the six-week strike will make their year, he said.

"The immature and undisciplined students have suffered during the strike," said Esquimalt senior secondary principal Court Brousson in his report.

"Don't wait for June."

Some examples of what schools are doing:

— Highrock junior secondary is opening its industrial education, home economics, and typing rooms daily before and after school hours and at noon, for students who want to do extra work.

Tutorials in non-lab courses are being given at the same times, and cassette tapes are being made available to help French students bone up.

— Central junior secondary has cut back the number of courses offered in its fourth quarter timetable so students who failed third quarter courses can repeat.

—Cedar Hill junior secondary is opening labs, shops, sewing and cooking rooms, and typing rooms early in the morning and at noon.

At Cedar Hill and a few other schools students who are behind are being told to attend after-school study sessions, as long as their parents approve.

Teachers at Shoreline, Esquimalt, S. J. Willis and other schools are available outside of regular school hours to give extra help.

Two elementary schools, Hillcrest and Margaret Jenkins, have felt it necessary to start a special program to help students who have slipped behind.

Hillcrest principal Donald Henderson said about 20 of the 400 pupils have fallen seriously behind.

South Park principal David Allan reported that 20 per cent of his pupils didn't attend at all for the duration of the strike, but teachers are managing to help them catch up.

One school, Burnside, has cut back on cultural programs and school sports training to give more time for academic subjects.

Yet another, McKenzie, is emphasizing physical education, art, music and science because these areas were neglected during the six weeks of shortened school hours.

George Jay and other schools are using student teachers to do remedial teaching with students.

Sooke Tax Jump

Sooke School District homeowners face a heavy tax increase this year as a result of a 38.93 education mill rate set Tuesday by the school board.

The rate is up more than 12 points over the 1974 rate of 26.10 mills—about 46 per cent.

District secretary-treasurer Marilyn Rudge said today the district has had a falling mill rate for several years but this year things have turned around.

She said the district ran a budget deficit last year and that deficit had to be covered in the 1975 budget.

Sooke district's gross budget for 1975 is $9.8 million, up from $7.5 million last year.

Education Minister Eileen Dailly has predicted the average education mill rate across the province will be 41.21 mills this year.

Greater Victoria school board will set its mill rate tonight; Saanich board will set its on Monday.

Summer Jobs Found for 38 Young People

Thirty eight young people have been hired to newly-created jobs in the Victoria area and another 62 are expected to be hired before month's end.

The program is being financed by the provincial department of labor and co-ordinated by Victoria Chamber of Commerce.

Project supervisor Leslie Fiddler of the department of labor said funds are available to hire about 100 young people and it appears that more than 100 suitable jobs will be available by the deadline date of April 25.

All positions are newly-created and not all jobs offered by businessmen are judged to be suitable. For example, she said, a total of 47 companies offered 70 new jobs in the first half of the placement program but only 38 young people were placed.

"We are being highly selective. The job has to be meaningful."

She said one of the side benefits of the program has been the creation of 12 new jobs on Salt Spring Island.

"Parents are worried because their children have to leave Salt Spring to find work in the summer and that can cause social problems.

"Now they are getting jobs on Salt Spring and can stay closer to home."

Of the first 38 jobs approved, 12 were on Salt Spring Island.

They are mainly construction jobs and summer employment related to the tourist industry.

The other 26 jobs newly created are in the Victoria area and range from assisting a hair stylist to marble cutting.

The young people are paid the minimum wage which works out to a minimum of $400 a month. They are guaranteed work for at least two months and not more than four months.

Standard work week is of 35 hours but this could go as high as 40 hours.

A major aim of the provincial government program is to find work for young people who might otherwise have difficulty finding jobs on their own. Unemployment is highest in the teenage group which was also an important factor in the creation of the program.

The provincial government pays 50 per cent of the salary up to a maximum cost to the department of $300.

Government Scraps Blanshard Tunnel

A switch in plans for the Blanshard Street extension will save the provincial government at least $1 million, Saanich Mayor Ed Lum said today.

Lum was commenting on a statement by Highways Minister Graham Lea Tuesday that plans for the controversial tunnel, originally planned as part of the extension at the Town and Country Shopping Centre, have been scrapped.

Instead, Lea said municipal officials and the highways department have agreed on one of two alternative routes proposed by Saanich.

Lum said Lea had not yet informed him which alternative route had been selected.

"Either alternative will mean the savings of at least $1 million," Lum said. "I told the minister when I became mayor I was against the tunnel and he agreed to consider other routes to go."

Saanich council found the tunnel concept unacceptable because of poor access for southbound vehicles and the blocking off of access to an area due to be developed.

Ask The Times

Q. My husband has an expression — son of a gun — which he uses all the time. He tells me it's a navy expression but I've never heard it used by any of the navy men we know. Is he right?—P.D.

A. He could be. There is a book on legends of the Royal Navy, based on days when women were allowed to go to sea, which states that if a wife was having a hard labor the ship's gunners would fire a volley to help the birth along. Hence, a boy born to the sound of gunfire would be a son of a gun. The term "pusser's blanket," if you're interested, is attributed to the fact that babies born aboard were presented with a blanket by the ship's purser.

Civic Dispute Delays Burials

After nearly 14 weeks of civic workers' dispute there are five deferred burials awaiting a return to work of Ross Bay Cemetery outside staff.

Undertakers say the figure is not unusual since there are normally few interments at the historic burial park where all available space and grave plots are allocated.

But the fact that burials have been held up even though funeral services were held in some cases is distressing to relatives of the deceased, undertakers say.

"I imagine most relatives would have been most upset, but that's my own personal feeling," observed Rev. Angus Cameron, one of the clergymen who took part in a deferred burial funeral service.

Relatives of the deceased said to him: "What a pity the service could not be completed." Some had come from California, Oregon and other parts of Canada for the funeral, Cameron said.

But another of the clergymen involved said he had no personal knowledge of concern.

"No one I know of has expressed any upset or distress because a body cannot be buried in Ross Bay Cemetery because of the strike," said Father John Lancaster.

Some bodies have been in cold storage for weeks pending the labor settlement that will allow gravediggers to do their work.

Undertakers say there should be no public concern about the situation. With additional embalming and cold room storage it is sanitary to keep a corpse for up to six months.

The real problem is the risk of running out of storage space, which became critical during a similar dispute in Vancouver recently, one funeral director said.

However, it was pointed out, in some parts of Canada the holding of bodies for months at a time is normal because deep frost makes digging impossible.

No Disobedience—Mother

A Victoria mother has denied that her son disobeyed her by attending a sex education class.

Mrs. Rosetta Newberry of 249 Wildwood Ave. said her son, a Grade 10 student at Central junior secondary school, didn't realize his regular math class had been switched to a special family life education class.

Mrs. Newberry said she had no prior notification of the class.

She had appeared before Greater Victoria school board Monday evening to protest her son's being subjected to the class.

Ted Callbeck, assistant director—special education programs for the school district, told the board at the meeting that Mrs. Newberry didn't want her son to attend the classes and he disobeyed her and attended.

Callbeck said today the two math classes the boy takes were cancelled April 15 to allow the district's itinerant family life teachers to present their program for Grade 9 and 10 students.

The switch in classes was clearly announced by Central vice-principal Terry Tobacco, Callbeck said, and if was up to students whose parents object to family life education not to attend.

The boy is unknown to the itinerant teachers, so they had no way of knowing he was in the class, he said.

Callbeck said parents had been notified last fall of an Oct. 10 meeting for parents at which the itinerant teachers and several physicians who help with the program explained exactly what would be taught.

A number of factors, including this year's custodians' strike, made it necessary to postpone the Grade 9 and 10 family life program until last week, he said.

Richard had been excused from the Grade 9 program last year, he said.

Legal Battle Over Bequeathed House

By ROGER STONEBANKS
Times Staff

An elderly Victoria woman knew what she was doing when she gave her house to two friends, B.C. Supreme Court was told Tuesday.

John McIllree, a lawyer who represented Effie T. Gellett who died in 1973, told Mr. Justice D. R. Verchere she "fully" comprehended the nature of what she was doing in March, 1971.

McIllree, one of the executors of her will, said she phoned him March 17, 1971, and asked for an appointment because she wanted to give her home at 1347 Craigdarroch to William and Pearl George.

"I advised her I did not think it was a good idea," he said, because it would incur gift tax immediately, she would bar herself from use of the house, she might have a future falling out with the Georges and could "incur the wrath" of her family who were the beneficiaries of her will.

"She said the Georges had been very kind to her and she wanted to make them a gift of the house," he said.

Two days later, in his office, papers were signed involving a deed of land from Mrs. Gellett to the Georges allowing her a life interest in the house, a promissory note from the Georges to her for $25,000 and a codicil (supplement) to her will forgiving money owing her from the Georges.

Also present at the meeting were his secretary, Ruth Peterson, the Georges and Mrs. Gellett.

"I might say the Georges seemed surprised at the events and said 'thank you' and 'we'll make sure the house is looked after'," McIllree testified.

Cross-examined by G. D. Dallas of Vancouver, McIllree agreed he had George go to Mrs. Gellett to assist in looking after the affairs of her husband who became ill in the late 1960s. George was her book-keeper after her husband died.

The house value of $25,000 seemed to her to be a good figure. It had been valued at $28,000 in 1970 but the market had declined.

He agreed that the land registry office wouldn't accept $25,000 as the value and it was then increased to $28,000.

Richard Law, representing McIllree and George in court, said there is no contest over Mrs. Gellett's will, only the codicil involving the house. The gross value of her estate was $114,164.39.

Dallas is representing Walter W. Moore, Mrs. Gellett's brother, who is one of the beneficiaries of her will.

Law said "It is suggested by Mr. Moore that it (thecodicil) was executed by undue influence or coercion."

Dr. William Kendrick, a specialist in urology, said he saw Mrs. Gellett March 17, 1971, because she complained of bleeding of the bladder, a typical sign of cancer.

"She was bright and alert. She seemed a very alert woman indeed. I was startled to see her stated age (83) and her appearance before me," he said.

He described her as "lucid, neat, clean." She understood then that she may have cancer of the bladder.

She was hospitalized March 29, 1971, after cancer of the bladder was diagnosed and released shortly after May 31. She died June 3, 1973.

The case continued today.

Vestgron Mines

Vestgron Mines Ltd., which operates the Black Angel Mine in Greenland, has reported first-quarter earnings of $1.4 million or 33 cents a share, compared with a loss of $1.7 million or 40 cents a share in 1974.

Gross revenue from first-quarter sales was $6.3 million from nearly 21,000 metric tons of zinc concentrates moved to Europe during the 1974 shipping season.

President O. E. Owens said the mine has been in production for about 18 months. Cominco Ltd. owns 61.5 per cent of Vestgron's issued shares, with the remaining shares held by other Canadian and Danish shareholders.

Westinghouse

Westinghouse Canada Ltd. reports profits for the first quarter ended Mar. 31 rose slightly compared with the same period a year ago.

D. C. Marrs, president, said in a statement that net earnings were $2,701,000 or $1.02 a share, up from $1,952,000 or 74 cents a year ago.

Sales for the quarter were $101 million, up 12 per cent from the year before.

He said an increase in orders for non-consumer products was partially offset by a drop in consumer producer orders.

Inco

International Nickel Co. of Canada Ltd. reports earnings for the months ending March 31 of $56.5 million or 76 cents a share, compared with $75.2 million or $1.01 a share for the similar 1974 period.

All figures are given in United States currency.

Net sales the first quarter of 1975 were $419.4 million, compared with $333.4 million for the corresponding 1974 period.

Sales by ESB Inc., acquired Aug. 1, 1974, made up 27 per cent of the 1975 sales "and accordingly the company's operating results include ESB's result only since that date," the company said.

It said a decrease in nickel deliveries was among reasons for the reduced earnings. Deliveries of nickel in the first quarter of 1975 totalled 92 million pounds, compared with 133 million pounds in the similar 1974 period.

The board of directors declared a regular quarterly dividend of 35 cents a share, payable June 2, 1975, to class A and class B shareholders of record May 5, 1975, Inco added.

Alcan

Alcan Aluminium Ltd. reports consolidated net revenue for the first quarter of 1975 of $17.6 million U.S., or 51 cents a share, compared with a restated $36.1 million or $1.05 a share in the corresponding period last year.

The company's sales and operating revenues for the same period totalled $533.7 million, compared with $534.4 million last year.

Although prices had improved from early 1974, shipments so far this year had declined.

Aluminum Co. of Canada Ltd., whose revenue is included in those of the parent company, reported a net loss of $556,000 for the first quarter, compared with a restated profit of $12.1 million for the corresponding period last year.

Gibraltar

Gibraltar Mines Ltd. reports net profits of $44,000 for the three months ended March 31, compared with $10.7 million in the same period in 1974, a company report says.

Declines in volumes of copper concentrate shipped to Japan and the price of copper caused the drop in profits, the report adds.

Concentrate shipments for the quarter were 20,300 tons compared with 35,900 in 1974 because of the longshoremen's strike, the company said. Concentrate inventory was 40,600 tons at the end of the quarter, compared with 6,100 tons last year.

The average London metal exchange price for copper during the quarter was 57.77 cents (U.S.) compared to $1.06 last year.

Westmills

Westmills Carpets Ltd. reports a loss of $70,000 for the 24 weeks ended Feb. 14 compared to a profit of $505,000 for the same period last year. Sales for the period were $9.8 million compared to $10.5 million in the 1974 period.

In an unaudited report to shareholders, directors H. J. Higson and A. D. Laird said market conditions continued to soften during the second quarter which caused the company's return on sales to decline further.

"We are still expecting conditions to improve by year-end but not in time to improve this year's performance significantly," the report adds.

Bank-America

Bank-America Corp., the holding company that owns San Francisco's Bank of America, reports a 20 per cent earnings gain in the first quarter of 1975.

Net income in the quarter totalled $66 million or 96 cents a share, up from $55.3 million or 80 cents a share the same period a year ago. President A. W. Clausen said the company had set aside $43.6 million to cover possible loan losses, up sharply from $15.2 million the same period in 1974.

Boise Cascade

Boise Cascade Corp. reports its income for the first quarter of 1975 fell more than 50 per cent below last year's earnings. The Idaho-based forest products company earned $12.3 million, or 42 cents per share compared with earnings of $25.6 million, or 87 cents per share, a year ago.

Barrett on Team

At first glance, it looks as though two of the three fullbacks selected for the Ebb Tide over-40 rugby team which will play the touring Fuwaku Club of Japan on Monday are cabinet ministers in the provincial government cabinet.

However, Premier Dave Barrett is the only government politician slated to play and he was named as fullback to the first-string side announced Tuesday by the Victoria Rugby Union.

Alec MacDonald, the third-string fullback, is not the attorney-general. The spelling of the name is slightly different and the rugby player is a retired memebr of the armed forces.

Each of the three strings comprising Ebb Tide will play a 20-minute period against a string from the visiting club. In that way, there'll be less strain on the players, who range up to 75 years of age (prop. Hector Nicholson) on the Victoria representative side and 74 on the Japanese team.

Ebb Tide lineups:

Fullback: 1, Dave Barrett; 2, Frank Gower; 3, Alec Macdonald.
Wings: 1, George Wilson and Stu Wright; 2, Harry Millard and John Skillings; 3, Jack Rowe and Ray Greenhouse.
Scrum Half: 1, Ray Ramsay; 2, Gary Webster; 3, Doug Gray.
Props: 1, Doug Stewart and Harry Turner; 2, Howard Gerwing and Bill Stow; 3, Peter Barry and Grahan Budge.
No. 8: 1, Til Briggs; 2, Mort Graham; 3, Ken Travis.

LEGAL THREAT OVER SURFACE

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (UPI) — Bill Riordan, manager of tennis star Jimmy Connors, said Tuesday legal action might be filed this week to force the resurfacing of tennis courts to be used in the $250,000 match with Australian John Newcombe.

Riordan said Connors' attorneys would arrive in Las Vegas today and associate with a local law firm in filing show cause action against Newcombe.

The purpose of the legal manoeuver will be to force Newcombe to keep his contractual agreement to play Connors on a "new, supreme court" surface, said Riordan.

The $250,000 competition is scheduled April 26 in the Caesar's Palace Hotel's indoor tennis pavilion. This present surface of the court is a "supreme court" surface, and it is two and one-half months old. It is the same surface on which Connors defeated Rod Laver last February to win $100,000 but Connors still wants a change made for "a new surface" that would be "rougher in composition."

Connors, who arrived in Las Vegas Tuesday, said if the situation were not resolved he would leave. Newcombe has been in this gambling resort working out since Thursday. He has been keeping a low profile and was not available for comment Tuesday.

A Caesar's Palace spokesman said the hotel would remain neutral. He said another surface has been delivered to the hotel at a cost of $7,000 but the hotel would not pay to have it put down for the match.

City Cricketers Picked

Six players with the Victoria and District Cricket Association have been selected to representative sides scheduled to face two top-flight international teams late in May.

Dave Shaw of Castaways, Howard Martin of Cowichan and Alec Porter of Albion have been named to the B.C. XI which will tackle the Australian Test team at Brockton Point in Vancouver, May 21.

Kortwright Richards of Oak Bay, Martin, Tim Lord of Cowichan and Dave Auld of Castaways have been picked for the Western Canada Selects which will play the Aussies at St. Michael's University School on May 22.

Following the two B.C. matches the Australian side, will play two matches in Toronto.

On May 24, a B.C. side including Martin, Lord and Richards will play the Hyderabad Blues of India in Vancouver. The Indian XI will then play matches at Beacon Hill Park against select teams from the District Association May 25-26.

Colts Take Title

Peter Noel, who helped Colts to the playoff championship Sunday, has been voted the most-valuable player in the Oak Bay Invader Youth Football League.

Noel, Tony Brown and Wes Noldret each scored two touchdowns as the Colts trimmed the league-champion Bears 33-19 in the playoff final.

Clinton Dietz, quarterback for the Bears and winner of the league scoring title, was named the best offensive player and Steve Gasser was rated the top defensive player.

BROTHER ACT IN TOP FORM

VANCOUVER (CP) — Al Gillespie scored four goals and brother Tod added two more Tuesday night as Coquitlam J-Hawks nipped New Westminster Salmonbellies 9-8 in an exhibition Western Canada Junior Lacrosse League game.

City Soccer Clubs Win, Share Titles

Lakehill Meats captured the Division II title while Victoria Gorge Molsons shared the Division III championship and Victoria Van Isle Molding the Division VIII title in Vancouver Island juvenile soccer playoffs in Port Alberni.

Lakehill beat Alberni Jack's Tire Service 6-1. Gorge Molsons and Alberni Jordan and Biggs tied 0-0 in their final while Van Isle Molding and Parksville Legion '49ers battled to a 1-1 standoff in their final.

Rob Wallace, who scored a goal in aiding Victoria B.C. Land and Insurance to a 3-3 tie in the Division V final, was selected Soccer Boy of the tournament.

THORBURN OUSTED

SYDNEY, Australia (CP)— Canadian Cliff Thorburn was eliminated from the world professional snooker championships today, falling 23-14 to Australian champion Eddie Charlton in quarter-final play.

The Toronto shooter, a former resident of Victoria, simply didn't have the shots to match Charlton, who had defeated current North American champ Bill Werbeniuk of Winnipeg in second-round action.

Charlton advanced to semi-final play with Irishman Dennis Taylor while defending champion Ray Reardon of Wales and Alex Higgins of Ireland will meet in the other semi matchup.

Fans Cool Rockets

By The Associated Press

Fans are becoming more and more important as the National Basketball Association playoffs progress. They meant victory Tuesday night to Boston Celtics and Golden State Warriors.

It was unfortunate for Houston Rockets, however, that it was their fans who helped the Celtics score a 122-117 triumph. The decision gave Boston a 3-1 edge in the best-of-seven Eastern Conference semi-final series.

The Rockets had whittled down a big Celtics' lead as the fourth-quarter minutes ticked away. When Houston centre Kevin Kunnert was called for a loose-ball foul, the crowd went wild.

They threw ice, paper cups and even a pair of men's shoes as the Celtics scattered for cover.

"Houston's crowd helped us out," said Boston coach Tommy Heinsohn. "It took about five minutes to get the court cleared and we all got a nice little rest."

Apparently, the rest benefitted the Celtics more than the Rockets ,who face possible extinction Thursday at Boston.

Rest also helped the Warriors' Rick Barry, who watched most of the third period while his team-mates beat Seattle SuperSonics 124-100 to take a 3-2 lead in that Western Conference semi-final.

Those were the only NBA playoff games scheduled Tuesday night. The other Eastern Conference semi-final resumes tonight with Washington Bullets taking their 3-2 lead to Buffalo, while in the West, Chicago Bulls lead Kansas City-Omaha Kings by the same margin entering tonight's sixth game.

Dave Cowens and Don Chaney finished with 29 points as Boston survived 35 points by Houston's Calvin Murphy and 31 more by Mike Newlin. The Celtics built a big lead on a second period in which they shot 52 per cent from the field, made all six free throws and outrebounded the Rockets 17-8.

The Warriors increased their lead from 16 to 27 points with Barry on the bench, a fact that impressed coach Al Attles. Also impressive was the performance of Barry's substitute, Keith Wilkes, who scored a game-high 24 points and grabbed eight of his team's 62 rebounds.

Canadian Trio Fells Americans

PINEHURST, N.C. (AP) — Defending champion Marlene Streit of Canada lost the first hole to a birdie but hustled through a par performance to beat Sally Voss of the United States 4 and 2 in Tuesday's opening round of the North and South amateur golf tournament.

Sue Higgs, a native of London, Ont., and now a physical education teacher at University of Regina, defeated Bonnie Lauer of the U.S. 2-up. The other Canadian winner, Susie Conklin of Lachine, Que., won on the 20th hole with a par four over Cati Biszantz of the U.S.

CUPE, Municipalities Just Aren't Sport Fans

CUPE isn't a sports fan, and neither are any of the municipalities. So there!

Otherwise all the arenas would be open, the minor hockey schedules would have been completed, the curlers at Esquimalt would have been able to finish their season, the figure skaters would have had more ice time, the swimmers would be ready for the competitive season, the lacrosse boxes would be cleared for the season's opener, the playing fields all over the town would be ready for the baseball and softball seasons, and the golfers would have at least one decent municipally operated course. Pretty soon they won't.

Yes, Cedar Hill is in poor shape and getting poorer and poorer. And it's all the fault of the strike, whoever is to blame. And it's a great commentary on the times, isn't it, screwing up a recreational facility such as this in the interests of whatever. The course wasn't too bad during the winter and early spring, but now that the growing process has taken over, things will rapidly go from bad to worse, and if nobody cares, they should, because a fine developing course is being ruined.

Besides, tournaments have been cancelled, other events will be and, it may or may not be known, but professional Bill Goldsworthy finds himself as the innocent victim sitting squarely in the middle with nowhere to go and no-one to turn to. He's not CUPE and he's not Saanich management, per se, and the betting is that nobody but Goldsworthy and his staff give a damn either. Which is a damn shame because he has done much for Cedar Hill and for golf in the community. And if he doesn't want to rock the boat, that's understandable. It's just that it's ripping him up inside to see what is happening to his club; and maybe his job.

— So the motion to resume play is out of order. That's easy to figure too.

Whatever Piece of Water

Now take the case of the Victoria Amateur Swimming Club. It's fairly typical of how some sports organizations have been suffering because of the current dispute.

Jim Toakley, past president and a director of the VASC, the oldest swim club in the city, was saying: "No, we aren't about to go out of business. But yes, we are having difficulty."

One problem for the VASC includes having had to cancel the annual Victoria Invitational meet. This is usually the first big test of the season for the swimmers and most important in the club program. Besides, the cancellation, the club naturally is stuck for the incidental costs, medals, printing, the lot.

"But there is more to it than that," said Toakley. "Ours is a multi-problem. We have to swim in whatever piece of water we can find. At present we are using the "Y", St. Michael's University School and the Bay Street Armories. St. Mike's have been very decent to us. They've given us pool time. At the others we pay premium rates. But these are small pools, and we need bigger."

Last year the VASC budget was $21,000. This year it's $28,000. "But under present conditions we're paying out $600 a month more than we're taking in," said Toakley.

And if a club can't make ends meet that way, the obvious has happened. Club membership is on the wane. "When the dispute began, we had 115 members. Now we have 70," he added.

Some Olympic Hopefuls

Then there's the question of the club itself. Toakley feels that for the past couple of seasons the club has been showing great overall improvement, and that there was the fondest hope that perhaps one or two club members might have a chance for the Canadian Olympic team. Now, he's not too sure because of the lack of competitive meets and top-line practices.

Toakley was referring to Karen Rushcall and Rob Grundison in particular in regard to the Olympics. "Karen is No. 1 in her group for the butterfly in B.C.," he said, "and Grundison was recently named to the Western Canada team which competed against American Universities." He also noted that Janet Rushcall, sister of Karen, "has tremendous potential".

Toakley admits there is a problem peculiar to swimming which does not affect other sports. That is, a steam engineer is needed in the operation of a pool whereas youngsters who play outdoor sports can just go out and play.

So what's the club going to do? Toakley isn't absolutely certain, but it's likely it will carry on hoping that everything will soon be resolved. Which is what it's been doing for the past 12 weeks and slowly going broke too.

But then, I don't suppose anybody gives a damn. Especially CUPE or any of the municipalities.

Victoria Swimmers Winners at Calgary

CALGARY — Five Victoria swimmers made a strong showing last weekend at the B.C.-Alberta dual meet at the University of Calgary.

Competing in the girls' 13-and-14 age group, Alison Noble won the 100-metre backstroke (1:09.9) and Janet Rushcall took the 200m freestyle (2:18.1).

Patti Gilker finished first in the 100m backstroke (1:15.0) for girls 11-12 and Judy Newman captured the 200m breaststroke (2:55.3) for girls 15-17.

Doug Portelance was runnerup in boys' 15-17 200m backstroke (2:21.7).

Rushcall and Noble were also members of two winning B.C. relay teams, while Newman and Gilker were each on one winning team.

Hot Hurling Helps Doc Shed a Cold

By The Associated Press

Pitcher Doc Medich had a cold Tuesday but he didn't let the virus affect his right arm as he pitched a three hitter for a 5-0 New York Yankees victory over Boston Red Sox.

"I woke up with a cold," Medich said. "It started yesterday when my lungs became congested. I took some aspirin before the game. I was bothered a little in the early innings, but it went away as things progressed."

Elsewhere in American League baseball action, Fergie Jenkins' two hitter gave Texas Rangers a 2-1 win over Oakland A's, Baltimore Orioles beat Milwaukee Brewers 1-0, Chicago White Sox defeated Kansas City Royals 7-3, Detroit Tigers beat Cleveland Indians 6-2 and Minnesota Twins defeated California Angels 7-1.

In the National League, Greg Luzinski drove in three runs to lead Philadelphia Phillies to a 7-5 victory over Chicago Cubs; Dave McNally won his third straight in pitching Montreal Expos to a 4-3 win over Pittsburgh Pirates; Ralph Garr's bases-loaded ground-rule double propelled Atlanta Braves past Los Angeles Dodgers 3-2; Del Unser's three hits sparked New York Mets to a 9-5 triumph over St. Louis Cardinals; San Diego Padres shaded Houston Astros 2-1 on Willie McCovey's second-inning homer and Tito Fuentes; RBI single, and a throwing error by rookie catcher Marc Hill enabled Joe Morgan to score from third in Cincinnati Reds' 5-4 win over San Francisco Giants.

Medich was locked in a scoreless duel with Rick Wise until Bobby Bonds delivered a run-scoring single in the sixth inning. Bonds homered in the eighth following a suicide squeeze bunt by Elliott Maddox and New York added two more runs in the ninth on Chris Chambliss' RBI double and Sandy Alomar's triple.

Jenkins stopped Oakland on two hits and Tom Grieve tripled home the Rangers' winning run in the fourth inning as Texas ended the A's four-game winning streak. Grieve's triple off Ken Holtzman scored Jim Fregosi, who led off with a double.

The only Oakland hits were a second-inning homer and seventh-inning single by designated hitter Billy Williams, Jenkins' long-time former team-mate with the Chicago Cubs. They are close friends who hunt and fish together during the off-season.

"I know his style of pitching, having played behind him for so many years," Williams said. "He doesn't like to throw many pitches, so you have to be ready. The home run came on a fast ball. It was too good a pitch to let go by."

Bobby Grich's home run with two out in the eighth inning produced the Orioles' only run while Jim Palmer pitched a sixhitter for his second shutout of the season. Grich hit his second home run of the year into the left field stands after Milwaukee starter Pete Broberg had fanned the first two batters in the eighth.

Coming off a bout with the flu which sidelined him for 10 days as a starter Jim Kaat got well in a hurry by pitching the White Sox to their first victory in six starts with seventh-inning help from Terry Forster. It also ended Kansas City's five-game winning streak and was Kaat's ninth consecutive victory since last Sept. 4.

Chicago hammered Bruce Dal Canton for five runs in the first two innings and then clinched the game on Brian Downing's two-run homer off Marty Pattin in the third.

Ron LeFlore's scratch double led a five-run fifth inning as Detroit rallied behind Lerrin LaGrow's six-hit pitching.

REGINA GOALIE NOMINEE

TORONTO (CP) — Two goaltenders and a centre are in the running for the first CCM Trophy, to be awarded annually to the outstanding performer in the three major junior hockey leagues.

Nominated for the award to be presented during the Memorial Cup junior hockey championships at Kitchener, Ont., May 3-11, are:

— Centre Doug Jarvis, Peterborough Petes, Ontario Major Junior A Series;

— Goaltender Ed Staniowski, Regina Pats, Western Canada Hockey League.

The selection is based on the player's proficiency and productivity, his participation in activities other than hockey, gentlemanly conduct, sportsmanship, leadership qualities, ability to communicate and his scholastic standing.

Oleschuk's Saves Pace Blade Win

NEW WESTMINSTER (CP) — Saskatoon Blades took a 2-0 lead Tuesday in their best-of-seven Western Canada Hockey League final with a 5-1 win over New Westminster Bruins before 2,334 fans.

The next three games, if necessary, start in Saskatoon Thursday.

Playing a disciplined, defensive style of hockey, the Blades checked the Bruins to a standstill and took advantage of opportunities to score.

Canucks' Hopes Die in Overtime

By The Canadian Press

Montreal Canadiens and Buffalo Sabres begin their Stanley Cup semi-final series Sunday while New York Islanders are stubbornly standing in the way of Pittsburgh Penguins' hopes for the other semi-final berth.

Montreal advanced Tuesday night with a 5-4 overtime victory over Vancouver Canucks, winning that National Hockey League quarter-final series 4-1.

The Sabres also won their quarter-final 4-1 with a 3-1 victory over Chicago Black Hawks. The Sabres and the Canadiens will open the semi-final on Buffalo ice.

At Pittsburgh, the Penguins' series lead was reduced to 3-2 when the Islanders, who lost the first three games, beat Pittsburgh 4-2. The next game is at Uniondale, N.Y., Thursday.

The winner of that quarter-final goes against the defending champion Philadelphia Flyers who are resting after eliminating Toronto Maple Leafs in four games.

Montreal coach Scotty Bowman admitted his club could be the underdog in the series when he said: "Well, we only had a tie in five games against them this year."

But the Canadiens had to stage a furious rally against the Canucks who had won the second game of the series on Montreal ice. The Canucks went ahead 1-0 in the first period, 3-2 in the second period and extended the margin to 4-2 early in the third.

Peter Mahovlich's second goal of the game and a score by Guy Lapointe tied it up midway in the third period.

Lafleur's winning shot at first appeared to have been deflected by team-mate Yvan Cournoyer but Cournoyer disclaimed credit for the goal.

Kearns, who was standing near the corner of the crease when Lafleur's shot bounced off him and past goalie Gary Smith, left the ice without shaking hands with the Montreal players and was not available for comment after the game.

SAINTS' EFFORT NEEDS UPGRADING

QUEBEC (CP) — Coach Harry Neale of Minnesota Fighting Saints figures that if they are to beat Quebec Nordiques his charges will have to put out a better effort than they did Tuesday night.

The Saints dropped a 4-1 decision to the Nordiques and fell behind 1-0 in their World Hockey Association best-of-seven semi-final series.

Only Jeannot Gilbert, managed to beat Garrett with a 10-footer at 15:21 of the first period.

But the Nordiques scored three goals in the final period to salt the game away. They went to Renald Leclerc, Gilbert and Rejean Houle.

Meanwhile, the other semi-final set between San Diego Mariners and Houston Aeros begins Friday night in San Diego. The second game of that best-of-seven is to be played in the California city Sunday night.

Two Titles to B.C.

Can-Am vs. Sprint Car

ROY SMITH
. . . in the sprint car

DAVID SAVILLE PECK
. . . in the Can-Am car

By JIM CRERAR
Times Staff

"Anybody can drive a car and turn left all the time," David Saville Peck chided Ian Vantreight, chief mechanic for Roy Smith's Daffodil Special, at last Sunday's season-opening stock car races at Western Speedway.

Vantreight took exception, naturally. As a matter of fact, he threw down the gauntlet.

As a result, it looks like Western Speedway fans will get a chance later this summer to see if a Can-Am sports car prototype, normally driven on twisting road racing circuits, can beat an open-wheeled sprint car on an oval track.

Western Speedway will be the site. Still to be settled is the date as well as financial and racing details. Peck, owner and driver of Innerdale Racing's Costello SP8 Can-Am car, Smith and Vantreight are now working on them.

Peck will need time for practice, too. Although he has driven competitively on an oval track, Sunday marked the first time he had tried to steer a Can-Am car at the five-eighths mile Western circuit.

"It's not as easy as it looks," he admitted. "We got our lap time down to 16.90 seconds and I understand the track record is 15.67. I had to shift gears four times on each circuit."

Therein lies one of the basic differences between the two cars. Smith doesn't have to shift in the Daffodil Special but there is a five-speed transmission in Peck's car. He plans to play around with the gear ratio until he, too, can drive in a shiftless manner.

Smith's car outweighs Peck's by 500 pounds, 1,950 to 1,450, but Peck can hit a peak speed of 220 m.p.h. compared to Smith's top speed of 140 m.p.h.

That's academic, however, as the fastest anyone has driven on Western's short straightaways is an estimated 110 m.p.h.

More critical is the suspension, and Peck figures he may be at a disadvantage here because the Daffodil Special's suspension is designed for oval tracking while his isn't.

Vantreight isn't so sure.

"David's got the lighter car which is going to manoeuvre better," he countered, "but Roy's got power. I would say that David has the advantage on the turns, perhaps as much as a second, so it comes down to a question of whether Roy can make up that second on the straightaway."

Vantreight feels the race must be at least 20 laps to be a fair test but anything up to 50 is possible.

Consider Personal Needs Before Buying That 4x4

If you are either thinking about buying a four-wheel-drive vehicle for your recreational needs or have recently bought one, the following synopis of the approach we used and the equipment we carry might be of help.

Naturally, the first consideration is cost. After that, everyone has to determine their own specific needs and tailor a vehicle to suit those requirements.

When our family expanded to three, we found the old short wheelbase 4x4 just a little bit small to conveniently carry all our gear. That fact, plus a few wallet-deflating indications that the six-cylinder engine and low-geared rear end weren't really up to the 60-plus miles of commuting we do each day, dictated a change.

Neither of us wanted the high operating cost or unwieldy driving characteristics of the largest members of the four-by-four clan, so we opted for a medium wheelbase model with a removable steel top.

Then came the task of wading through the inevitable list of options.

Tube-type winter-tread tires were the first choice. Tubeless tires are fine for highway use but things can get dicy off-road if you get more than one flat.

Next on the list was a roll bar. We didn't have one in the previous vehicle but came close to rolling over on several occasions. It's cheap life insurance.

Other essentils were skid plates for the 30-gallon gas tank, transmission and transfer case. A puncture or crack in any one of these could leave a vehicle stranded beyond help.

A complete set of gauges is also a must. "Idiot lights" only come on when it is too late to correct a malfunction.

Three options which will enable my wife to drive the vehicle with greater ease are power steering, power brakes and an automatic transmission.

That last item is one of the most serious bones of oral contention when four-wheelers get together. Basically, an automatic gets you up the hills with greater ease and control but a manual transmission enables you to get down again without excessive braking — which can sometimes cause skidding. So you have to make a choice and live with it.

Heavy-duty springs, axles, battery and alternator complete the list of items we ordered with the vehicle. The ride may be a little rougher as a result but the basic components should last a little longer under the rigors of off-highway travel.

The battery and alternator are required for the electric winch we subsequently added to the front of the vehicle along with a thicker bumper. The stock bumper went into storage with a liberal coating of vaseline and will be put on again when it comes time to look for something new.

Mounting a roof rack proved to be a challenge since Detroit engineers deemed it necessary to eliminate the handy drip rail on a number of different vehicles — including the one we bought. Three cross-pieces of the roof rack are mounted on stainless steel brackets fabricated at a local metal shop and screwed directly to the roof. The other cross-piece is mounted on the vestige of a drip rail over the front doors.

A three-quarter inch thick piece of plywood, sturdy enough to walk on, will be bolted to the cross-pieces and carpeting tacked over the ends will help get the canoe on top.

I'm currently constructing a narrow box which will run the length of one side of the plywood. Into this will go our propane bottle and some other items of equipment which make four-wheeling a little safer.

Included in our list of necessities are an axe, saw, snatch-block (for use in winching), a length of chain with shackles on each end, extra cable, tire pump, tube patching kit and a shovel. When choosing a shovel, make sure you can use it to remove dirt or debris from under the centre of a stuck vehicle — this means the blade angle should be on nearly the same plane as the handle.

As stated at the outset, these are the items of equipment which suit our own particular requirements.

But they may give you an idea about some of the things to specify when that eager salesman starts waving an option list in your confused face.

And, above all, make a thorough study of the different vehicles available before going near a car lot — very often you'll wind up knowing more than the salesman. Magazines which do test reports on various recreation vehicles are the best source of information and back issues dealing with any specific type of vehicle are always available.

Times Rolloff Repeaters

Four former champions will be in Sunday's field in the 12th annual Times Bowler-of-the-Year men's fivepin rolloffs at Town and Country Lanes.

Bill Cool (1967), Darrell Prezeau (1969), George Waugh (1973) and King Lee (1974) are the former titlists who'll be after a second championship.

Only two bowlers have captured the crown twice. Stan Jones performed the feat in 1964 and 1971 and Norm Goldie did it in 1965 and 1970.

Top qualifier this season, however, was non-winner Jerry Melissa, who fired 347-323-360—1,030 series in 15th week of 26-week Bowler-of-the-Week contest.

And four other non-winners also passed the 950 plateau. George Coldwell threw a 991, Jake Jacob a 982, Kim Buckley a 973 and Geoff Worrall a 961.

Bowlers qualified for the rolloffs in Bowler-of-the-Week contests. Awards in each of the four categories — men's and women's fivepins and men's and women's tenpins — went to those who rolled the highest three-game scratch total in regular league play on southern Vancouver Island lanes.

Women's fivepin rolloffs will also be held Sunday at 1 p.m. at Town and Country Lanes.

Rolloff winners will each receive a Times Trophy and any winner who is also a daily subscriber to Victoria Times will collect a $100 bonus prize.

SCHOOL SPORTS
jim crerar

Coach Peter Simmonds summed up this season's track and field prospects at Claremont Senior Secondary in one sentence.

"At graduation," he said, "the whole track team seemed to walk across the stage in front of me."

He was referring to last spring's graduation ceremonies which turned into something of a nightmare when Simmonds toted up the athletes who wouldn't be back this year.

Among the missing:

—Tom Michell, winner over 200 and 400 metres in last year's B.C. high school championships and anchorman on Claremont's second-place relay team;

—Jean Palfrey, mainstay among the school's sprinters and hurdlers;

—Don Tillie, winner of city and Island titles in the hammer throw and third in B.C.

Claremont finished second to Mt. Douglas in the city and Island meets last year and was sixth in the provincial finals.

"We're not going to be as strong as in other years," Simmonds advised. "But again this year, we're emphasizing participation. We've had more than 60 out for track and that represents about 10 per cent of our student body."

And not everybody walked across the stage last spring.

Simmonds has some excellent prospects back. They include:

—Raul Estrada, third in the B.C. pole vault finals last year and shooting for a height of 14 feet, 6 inches this spring. If he makes it, he'll have a good chance at the provincial title;

—Leslie Howe, a sprinter and hurdler on whom Simmonds is counting heavily;

—Alan Sheridan, Claremont's most versatile track athlete who competes in the high, triple and long jumps, the hurdles and both the 4x100-metre and 4x400-metre relays;

—Ted Bartlett, an "A" flight city finalist last year over 800, 1,500 and 3,000 metres.

There are a couple of exceptional prospects among the newcomers, too.

Harold Willers, a star rugby back, is big and versatile. He's 5'11" and weighs 183 pounds, competes in shot put, discus and javelin and is fast enough for consideration as the anchor on both Claremont relay teams.

The other outstanding newcomer is Debbie Scott, who didn't compete in track in junior high school but ran cross-country for Claremont last fall and finished fifth in B.C.

"She'll be the brightest light for us," said Simmonds. "Already this year she's broken school records in 800 metres (2:18) and 1,500 metres (4:42). She's going to surprise an awful lot of people."

Claremont may do likewise despite the loss of personnel. They take the sport seriously at the school, evidenced by the fact that the students three years ago raised money to built a new track.

CHALK DUST — St. Michael's University School, winner of the Victoria high school rugby championship last Friday night, will pass up the B.C. high school spring rugby tournament May 9 and 10 in Kamloops . . . After a season that began last September, the school felt players should be given a chance to participate in the spring sports program . . . Frank Gower's Oak Bay Barbarians will make the trip . . .

Fine Timing by Tasker

LANDOVER, Md. (CP) — Rookie Brian Tasker scored with five seconds left to play Tuesday night as Maryland Arrows defeated Long Island Tomahawks 19-18 in National Lacrosse League action.

Tasker, a former Richmond Roadrunner star had earlier scored two goals and assisted on three others while teammate Paul Suggate also had three goals and three assists.

Many Canadians are over-fed . . . but not well-nourished! This startling fact has come to light through the Nutrition Canada Report and many other recent studies.

Realizing that this serious problem exists in British Columbia, as in the rest of Canada, we at Canada Safeway want to do what we can to help. We have created Nancy Nutrition. She will bring you worthwhile information on good eating habits, what to buy to eat better, facts about vitamins and minerals, menu planning . . . many, many useful guidelines to help you eat better for less.

Watch for Nancy Nutrition in our ads and in our stores. If you and your family are to be well-nourished and healthy you must eat wisely. You must plan your meals to be sure that each family member gets his or her daily requirements. Then you are doing all you can to safeguard the good health and well-being of your whole family.

Nancy Nutrition* says "Eat well to feel well. You are what you eat, so choose your food carefully".

Nutrients

The important ingredients contained in foods are called nutrients: proteins, carbohydrates, fats, minerals, vitamins and water. These nutrients are essential for energy, for growth and maintenance. Why maintenance? Because your body continues to rebuild itself even after you have stopped growing.

Good food will provde all the nourishment your body needs . . . without extra supplements. But you must choose wisely when you plan meals. To help choose a nutritious, well-balanced diet, all foods have been arranged into four basic groups. You must eat food from each of these groups and eat the amount recommended every day to be sure you are not undernourished.

Nancy Nutrition has four symbols to identify the four food groups. Look for these symbols in our advertisements and in our stores. They will identify the basic food group each food is taken from and they will guide in wise and healthful menu planning.

MEAT GROUP—
2 servings a day.
Sources: meat, fish, poultry, dried peas and beans, peanut butter, eggs, cheese and nuts.

DAIRY GROUP—
Children need 2 or 3 servings or 20 oz. per day.
Adolescents need 4 servings or 32 oz. per day.
Adults need 1½ servings or 12 oz. per day.

FRUITS AND VEGETABLES GROUP—
4 servings or more a day, one rich in vitamin C and one rich in vitamin A. Some vitamin C rich sources are: broccoli, green pepper, cauliflower, spinach, strawberries, brussels sprouts, oranges and other citrus fruits, vitaminized apple juice. Some vitamin A rich sources are carrots, squash, sweet potatoes, spinach, beet greens, apricots, peaches, cantaloupe.

CEREAL GROUP—
Sources: all foods made from oats, wheat, rice, rye, and other grains.

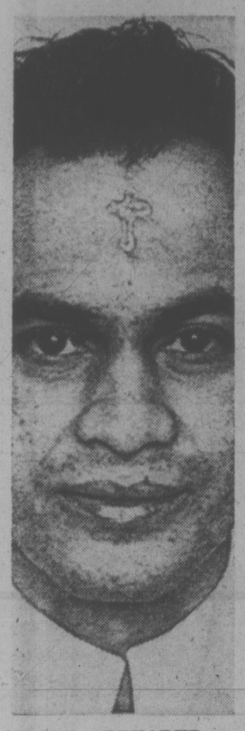
Requiem for a Smuggler Became a Shootout



CROSS APPEARED on the forehead of Paul Mohamed — he claims — after he had a vision in which he saw St. Veronica. Mohamed claims to have healed several people of mysterious ailments since it appeared.

NAPLES, Italy — A requiem mass for a dead smuggler came to an abrupt end Tuesday when his relatives tried to chase away the widow, her brother shot a member of the congregation and the priest fainted.

Police said relatives of smuggler Antonio Marra, believed drowned at sea Dec. 23, did not want his 21-year-old widow at the mass because they thought she had had an affair with another man.

A fight developed and the widow's brother, Michelle Spaventa, 19, shot and seriously wounded Giovanni Marra. The officiating priest fainted at the altar. Spaventa was gone by the time police arrived.

TEL AVIV — The chief supply officer of the Israeli Air Force has been charged with taking bribes. Reserve Brig. Gen. Haim Yarom was released on bail following his arrest along with seven other suspects, Israeli officials said Tuesday. The alleged bribes included a girl's bicycle, free meals in restaurants, electric appliances and special rates for buying old rental cars and selling them for profit.

GENOA, Italy — An argument between rival fruit vendors over who had the best wares ended in a shooting that left one of them near death. Police said Antonio Barilla, 42, and Angelo Russo, 36, began discussing prices at the Ventimiglia market Tuesday. Barilla boasted about the superior quality of his produce and Russo pulled out a pistol and fired four shots. Barilla was admitted to a hospital in critical condition.

ST. LOUIS, Mo. — Sen. Stuart Symington, the 73-year-old Democrat who has served for nearly a quarter of a century in the U.S. Senate, says he will not seek another six-year term in 1976. He had decided against running because of his health, the death of his wife and the belief that the state Democratic party needed a strong leader, he said.

ROANOKE, Va. — More young women at Hollins College have tried marijuana than cigarettes, according to a survey by psychology professor Paul Woods. Woods said his survey of 15 per cent of the student body showed that 70 per cent of the students had smoked marijuana and 54 per cent had smoked cigarettes.

LONDON — Three weeks after actress Mary Ure's opening-night death, the play The Exorcism is to close. Co-star Honor Blackman blamed "fear of the supernatural" for the collapse of the play, a thriller by Don Taylor about a Christmas Eve dinner party in a country cottage haunted by the sufferings of previous tenants.

BONN — Former West German chancellor Willy Brandt will make an official one-week visit to the Soviet Union beginning May 14. Brandt's Social Democratic party said Tuesday his schedule includes a meeting with Leonid Brezhnev, general secretary of the Soviet Communist party and a visit to Leningrad. Brandt resigned last year following the discovery of an alleged Communist spy on his personal staff.

Dad's Never Done It He'll Learn Hard Way

CINCINNATI — Mark Levy, 27, the father of quintuplets born four weeks prematurely to his wife who had been taking fertility drugs, said today "I don't know what's hit me. I've never changed diapers."

Doctors said chances for the quints survival were very good.

Three girls and two boys, described by doctors as "normal and quite lovely babies," were born to Mrs. Pamela Levy, 28, Cincinnati, at General Hospital Tuesday afternoon.

'this is going to be a little tough for the first year or so," said Levy. "I've never changed diapers. This is still hard to believe. I don't know what has hit me.

"At first they told us to expect twins and then later triplets," said Levy, "and now here we are with quints."

Dr. Irwin Light said "the babies are doing fine and the outlook for their survival is very good. They are very active and very vigorous babies."

Mrs. Levy, a counsellor at White Oaks junior high school, is petite and neighbors estimated she weighs only about 100 pounds.

Dr. James Sutherland, in charge of the hospital's premature nursery where the infants were being fed intravenously, said the first 72 hours is the critical period.

They Lived ... and Died Together!

LONDON — John and Arthur Mowforth, identical twins who shared the same interests and lived almost parallel lives, have died on the same night after each had a heart attack, their sister said Tuesday.

Mrs. Edith Taylor said: "It seems unbelievable. As boys they did everything together. What happened to one usually happened to the other."

The 66-year-old twins had each pursued careers in the British Air Force, each rising to the rank of squadron leader.

John died in hospital in Bristol, Western England, and his brother Arthur died in hospital at Windsor, west of London.

CHARITY DOESN'T PAY

Pat McCarthy said he was touched by a newspaper story of how 79-year-old Ada Tyler's old-age assistance money was being stolen from beneath her pillow, perhaps by her grandchildren.

He had $43 in cash and decided he could spare $25 of it.

McCarthy drove straight to Mrs. Tyler's neighborhood, parking his car down the street from her house.

McCarthy said he opened his car door and two men stuck their heads in, and said, "this is a holdup."

He explained what he was doing, but they didn't listen.

"I look around the neighborhood, and I see nobody else, no doors open, nobody," he said. "Those poor people, they're fearful of their own lives, so I handed over my pocket book."

He said the thieves also took the watch his late wife had given him and made him hand over 15 cents change from his pockets.

"I think the whole problem is that some people just forgot there's a God," Mrs. Tyler commented when told of the incident.

This year in Paris they awarded their Gold Medal to McGuinness Old Canada Whisky.
And their Silver Medal to McGuinness Gold Tassel Whisky.

SCARLET MACAW MISSING

Scarlet the macaw is missing again, probably lifted from Island View Beach on Sunday by a well-meaning visitor.

Scarlet belongs to David Hancock of Hancock House publishers on Island View Beach and was last seen walking along the beach at about 1 p.m. Sunday.

She's talkative and will answer to her name.

A spokesman for Hancock House speculated that someone at the beach on Sunday saw her walking by, figured she was lost and took her home.

Scarlet last disappeared in August, 1973 under similar circumstances, but was returned when the person who had found her realized she wasn't lost.

Telescope Planning Committee at UVic

A sixteen members of a three-nation scientific advisory committee are meeting at University of Victoria this week as part of the planning for Mauna Kea telescope in Hawaii.

The Canada-France-Hawaii Scientific Advisory Committee chaired by Dr. P. Charvin, of Meudon Observatory, Paris, acts as liaison between engineers who design and build the structure and the astronomers who will use it when it is completed sometime in 1978.

Canadian project officer is Dr. Graham Odgers, of the Dominion Astrophysical Observatory in Saanich, who has been working from the project's Canadian office in Ottawa. He and his French counterpart Dr. Roger Cayrel are taking part in the discussions at UVic.

The committee next meets in Paris in October.

The meetings here will adjourn Thursday, followed by a tour of the observatory optical shop where technicians are grinding and polishing the mirror for the new telescope, a job expected to be finished by the end of 1977.

The telescope itself is being built by France, which is equal partner with Canada with a 42½ per cent share in the undertaking. Hawaii is contributing 15 per cent of the cost.

Canada also is responsible for the physical housing of the telescope and the intricate electronic mechanism to drive it.

STILL ROOM FOR SENIORS

Tickets are still available for an eight-day holiday bus tour sponsored by the Oak Bay Senior Citizens' Activity Centre.

Four nights in Johnston Canyon resort camp in the Rocky Mountains will be part of the trip June 6 to 13.

Other spots to be covered will be Banff, Lake Louise, the Columbia Ice Field and Jasper.

Inmates Forced to Wear Diapers Court Told

WALLA WALLA, Wash. (AP) — Attendants at the mental health section of the Washington State Penitentiary here have been enjoined from chaining prisoners to beds or making them do such things as wear diapers and carry baby bottles.

Walla Walla county superior court granted the preliminary injunction after a lawsuit was filed by Michael Brookshire, an 18-year-old Puyallup man convicted of burglary.

The suit was filed against Charles Morris, secretary of the department of social and health services, Harold Bradley, director of adult corrections, penitentiary superintendent B. J. Rhay, Dr. William Hunter, the mental health unit psychologist, a third-floor supervisor and other employees.

"I think he's (Dr. Hunter) used some things like that (diapers and baby bottles) in the treatment process," Rhay said. "It's certainly taken out of context in this."

He said he couldn't comment further until he received a copy of the injunction.

In his suit, Brookshire said he was committed to the penitentiary Oct. 28, 1974, and was placed in isolation for 98 days because he refused to have his hair cut, allowed only to wear boxer shorts and have only a sheet and blanket.

He said he was only allowed to read a bible, while visitors, telephone privileges and a lawyer were denied. He said his head was forcibly shaved.

The suit says he cut himself Feb. 26 and swallowed a pencil in efforts to be transferred to the medical treatment section where he hoped to get legal help.

It says his cuts were scrubbed with a bristle brush and alcohol, some of his wounds were stitched and he was placed in isolation wearing nothing but a football helmet.

According to the action, after he got the helmet off he was chained to a bed for nine days with only a sheet.

The suit says the conditions are common and prisoners are often forced to crawl around on the floor for days wearing only diapers and carrying baby bottles.

In affidavits filed by Rhay and Hunter, the two men said Brookshire was admitted to the mental health unit only through a social and health services department order.

The affidavits say the prisoner has been a mental health patient almost continually since his arrival last October and his suicidal tendencies and behavior toward others make the ward the only safe place to keep him.

Bakers' Severance Pay Ordered by Court

OTTAWA (CP) — The Supreme Court of Canada has ruled that 93 bakers whose illegal strike prompted McGavin Toastmaster Ltd. to close its Vancouver bakery are entitled to severance pay.

In a 5-to-4 judgment, the high court rejected company arguments that the employees ceased to be employees because of their unlawful strike and were therefore excluded from benefits under their collective agreement.

Under their collective agreement, the employees are entitled to one week's pay for consecutive service up to two years. For employees with more than two years of service, severance pay is one week's salary for every year of fulltime service to a maximum of 20 weeks.

The 93 employees, all members of the Bakery and Confectionery Workers' International Union of America, decided to go on strike March 1, 1970, after learning that the Vancouver Bakery was closing down part of its operations.

three days later the company closed the plant and wrote to each of the 93 bakers saying "you are no longer an employee of this company."

Chief Justice Bora Laskin, writing the majority court decision, said it might be that the company had the right to start an action against the employees and insist on their discharge.

NEW FIRE TRUCK DOESN'T FIT IN

KAMLOOPS (CP) — The Kamloops Fire Department has a problem. It recently purchased a two-year-old aerial ladder truck with the intention of housing it in the main fire hall.

However, the department discovered Tuesday that getting the truck into the building is going to be a testy situation. The entrance to the fire hall has a clearance two feet less than the height of the truck.

Council authorized up to $150,000 for purchase of the two-year-old truck from the Everett, Wash., fire department. Kamloops Fire Chief Maurice Smith and a mechanic are in Everett and are to drive the truck here.

Estimates were being made Tuesday on the costs of increasing the size of the entrance to the main fire hall and if costs are more than $1,000, the matter will go to city council for approval.

Indians Less Militant

CHILLIWACK (CP) — The Union of British Columbia Indian Chiefs seems to be moving toward a less militant attitude, spokesman Bill Mussel said after Tuesday's second day of the group's annual assembly.

He said the basic feeling at the convention seems to be to fight with words and legal action rather than demonstrations and blockades.

The more than 190 chiefs from throughout B.C. approved a resolution seeking an alternative to the permit system on fishing.

They said the permit system is an infringement on native rights, and vowed that if no viable alternative could be found, they would fish even without permits.

Debate on the land claims issue was expected to continue today.

On Monday, Philip Paul, land claims director of the union, said it is time for Indians to develop a cohesive and collective strategy on the issue.

Paul's comments came after several weekend demonstrations by Indians throughout the province as activist groups threaten to take over land they claim is rightfully theirs.

Indians say their forebears did not sign away hereditary lands and protest the cutting off of some 36,000 acres from B.C. Indian reserves about 60 years ago. They are seeking the land primarily, and compensation as an alternative in certain cases.

Indians met in Terrace earlier in the month for a special land claims conference and instructed the annual assembly to drop everything but the land claim. However, the union's central council vetoed the resolution.

Intervention Urged

VANCOUVER (CP) — The British Columbia Federation of Labor has urged the provincial government to provide leadership in settling current disputes between several municipalities and the Canadian Union of Public Employees. The federation said that Deputy Labor Minister James Matkin should become involved in bringing the sides together.

Trial Ordered

CHILLIWACK (CP) — Kim Dombrowski, 20, and Bradley Telford, 20, both of Surrey, were committed Tuesday to stand trial on charges of unlawful confinement. No trial date was set. They were charged after two girls were picked up while hitch-hiking in December and taken to Cultus Lake near here against their will.

Drag Strip Eyed

NANAIMO (CP) — City council has asked the city solicitor to determine whether the city would be liable if a road leading to the city work yard and proposed as a drag strip was the site of any mishap. A group of young people asked council to consider their request for a drag strip for Sunday racing. Council was told RCMP Superintendent Jim Nelson has given his verbal approval of the proposal.

Pact Accepted

VANCOUVER (CP) — The Office and Technical Employees Union says it has accepted a new one-year contract with the University of British Columbia. The 45 draftsmen and project engineers will receive a 19-per-cent increase retroactive to April 1 and a five-per-cent cost-of-living adjustment Oct. 1.

Technical Slip

KAMLOOPS (CP) — A charge of driving with a blood-alcohol level over .08, laid against Thomas Lyla Pedrotti of North Vancouver, was dismissed on the grounds that the official certificate of analysis was improperly completed. The certificate did not specify the model of breathalizer machine used in determining the blood-alcohol reading.

Bus Referendum

PRINCE GEORGE (CP) — City council has authorized a referendum to be held June 4 for authorization to continue transit services past the expiry date of the transit system's present provincial subsidy.

The annual $60,000 subsidy expires June 30.

Council gave the city administration power to negotiate with Prince George transit the amount needed to subsidize operation of the city's proposed expanded bus system for another year.

Budget Approved

VANCOUVER (CP) — City Council has approved a 1975 budget of $132.14 million. The budget sets a mill rate for general tax vurposes of 17.28 mills. Alderman Fritz Bowers said the tax bill for the average city family home will increase by $83 to $1,499.

B.C. Oil Refinery Profit Predicted

VANCOUVER (CP) — It will take less than eight years for the proposed $350 million provincial oil refinery to pay off its capital investment, James Rhodes, chairman of the B.C. Petroleum Corp., said Tuesday.

Rhodes also said in an interview that the investment would build a refinery with a capacity of 85,000 barrels of petroleum products a day.

Previously, government officials, including Premier Dave Barrett, had talked about a capacity of 100,000 barrels a day.

The government corporation and the provincial cabinet were to begin meetings today to select a site for the refinery. Three locations are being considered—in the Vancouver suburb of Surrey, Roberts Bank, just south of here, and at Merritt, 130 miles northeast of here.

Rhodes said site preparation could start this year if a location is decided soon. He said construction will be through public tender.

"Our research has exploded the myth maintained by the petroleum industry that a refinery is just the middle part of a system and is not profitable," said Rhodes. "We know it will make money."

Rhodes said the corporation anticipates a petroleum product deficit in B.C. of 73,000 barrels a day by 1981. He said a provincial refinery starting operations in 1978 or 1979 would be in a position to serve the market.

He said consultants told the corporation it would be folly to build a plant under 75,000 barrels a day because of the economies of scale.

Sausage Been Around

Some historians say sausage was made and eaten by the Babylonians 1,500 years before Christ, in China.

FERRY EXPANSION PROTESTED

NANAIMO (CP) — City council has requested a meeting with Transportation Minister Bob Strachan to protest construction of a third ferry berth for the Departure Bay terminal. Despite council's opposition, officials of B.C. Ferries have said the $3.5 million project will proceed and said they hope to complete construction in time to use three new ferries in the 1976 summer season.

Carpet-Wrapped Body Puzzles Police

VANCOUVER (CP) — Police are still puzzled about the death of a man whose body, wrapped in a carpet which was tied at each end, was found partly submerged in the Fraser River on Sunday.

An autopsy Tuesday on the body of Edward Emmanuel Senger, 46, showed only a trace of morphine in the body but there were no traces of any needle marks anywhere on the body.

Heroin turns to morphine once it has been ingested into the body.

Police said that Senger was a known heroin user in 1956 when sentenced to 10 years on a drug charge, but said it was believed he had later kicked the habit.

In another development Tuesday, the man's father, Philip Senger of Coquitlam turned over to the RCMP more than $100,000 which he said was his son's property.

Police said further toxological tests would be conducted on the body. They are treating the case as a homicide.

BRIDLE BITS

Being involved in the operation of a horse show is a very interesting and rewarding experience. Apart from the organization of the affair there are many positions needing help.

Knowledgeable and competent announcers are always in demand. The larger horse shows, that can afford to pay their announcers, cannot always find suitable people for this position.

Ring-masters, a most important position, calls for a person able and willing to stand for hours in all kinds of weather and control the exhibitors in the ring according to the judge's wishes.

The person who controls the exhibitors in the collecting ring area prior to entering the judging ring holds a responsible position. The duties are to see that only those entered in the class proceeds to the judging ring and when the need arises in the order the ring-master requests.

There are many dedicate people who for the "love of the game," give freely of their days to assist in producing horse shows. The need for more of these people is great.

The recent show organized by the Victoria-Saanich Pony Club, a two-day show, was an example of a well organized affair run by too few people who worked long shifts both days.

Riding bareback can be fun under some circumstances and relatively free of danger when indulged in a closed area with a good soft cushion of sawdust to land on.

This form of riding however has little to recommend it. Those who consider the effects of riding without stirrups will soon realize the negative results.

Stirrups are to allow the rider to maintain balance when its mount suddenlly moves sideways. Even riders with a strong seat are thrown when this happens. It is natural to hang on with one's heels as long as possible, and in many instances, this means the head hits the ground first.

The use of stirrups allows one to put pressure in them to restrain a horse that wants to run. Without sitrrups a runaway is hard to avoid if the horse is so inclined.

Riding instructors today do have their pupils ride without feet in the stirrup for short periods to allow the riders to use their riding muscles. But this exercise is carried out in a closed school with soft landing in case of an involuntary dismount. Jumping without stirrups, under proper conditions, is an exercise also used but only with advanced riders on exceedingly well trained horses.

Without a saddle a rider must use the lower part of the leg to hang on and on a well schooled horse this is the "go" signal.

In order to maintain balance without stirrups a rider must use the reins, pulling on the horse's mouth, the signal to "stop," while at the same time giving the horse the signal to "go."

This of course causes the horse to become useless as a riding horse over a period of time.

It is obvious that riding bareback is dangerous, other than under special conditions. It develops bad riding habits for the rider which will be hard to change in the event riding instruction is desired later on. By the horse receiving contrary aids it soon has the animal thoroughly confused and unridable.

The Sooke Saddle Club held their third annual gymkana last Sunday. It was a great success.

Flag race—junior, Randy Ruttan; senior, E. Bryant;

Keyhole race — Junior, J. Ruttan, senior, C. Patrick.

Musical tires — junior, J. Ruttan, senior, C. Patrick;

Barrel race—junior, R. Ruttan; senior, L. Ruttan;

Pole bending—junior, R. Ruttan, senior, C. Patrick;

Potato race—junior, R. Ruttan, senior, C. Patrick;

Scurry race—junior, R. Ruttan, senior C. Clark;

Balloon popping—junior, J. Ruttan, senior, P. Zigay.

Door prize winners were: R. Bowman, Mrs. M. Ruttan and Mrs. J. Rimmer. The winners of prizes for the riders, were Miss J. Ruttan, Junior and Mrs. F. Heald, senior rider.

There will be a trail ride sometime in May but no date has been set to date.

The Riding Ring at the Fuller's Lake Recreational Park, Chemainus was the venue of the Chemainus Western Horsemen's Club Spring Show. In the Ennglish saddle division Debbie Bissenden took first place. Ian Roberts riding his horse Tamara won both Jumping Events. Mrs. Pam Lenko riding Pacific Sands accounted for Green Hunter Hack and first year Green Hunter. Anne Stone won the second year section of that event. Kim Beardsley aboard Julie's Trophy got the nod in the Hunter Hack event over a large entry. Sanla ridden by Harriet Hirt was awarded first place in Pony Hunter Hack and Junior "B" equitation. Andy Barrie on Mr. Bliss were at the top in Handy Working Hunter and took first ribbon. Green Jumper laurels went to Shelly Davidson on Breezy's Treasure in the over 14.2 section with Cindy Barikman first in the lower height competition riding Belle Vista. Pony Hunter honors went to Anne Lees with her pony Prima Donna in a good performance. Pony Show Hack was won by Lauri Brown riding Korwill Deylia. Korbie gave Claudia Lake a good enough ride to enable her to win the Jr. Equitation and came back in Harness to go well enough to have Mr. A. Rawlins win the Driving Event.

Howie Thomas dominated the games division with wins in junior stakes race, flag race, barrel race and the junior scurry. Susan Hill on Destry won the pole bending.

Top-Secret Uranium Plan Bared

PARIS (Reuter) — South African scientists gave details Tuesday of a top-secret nuclear fuel process which could make their country an exporter of enriched uranium.

"We are pleased that the stage has been reached in our enrichment program which enables us to lift the curtain somewhat," Dr. A. J. Roux, president of the South African Atomic Energy Board, told an international conference of nuclear experts.

He said South Africa developed its own uranium enrichment process in the last five years at a pioneer plant at Valindaba.

Roux said he expects the South African government to decide soon to build a major uranium enrichment plant with a capacity of 5,000 tons of separation work units (SWU).

Enriched uranium is the key fuel element in nuclear power stations, which most advanced Western countries now are planning to build at an increased rate to reduce dependence on oil.

Roux said South Africa is prepared to share her expertise with friendly countries on certain conditions—one of which is that it be used only for peaceful purposes.

Prince Dons Dancing Slippers

OTTAWA (CP) — "The best compliment anyone can pay me, is to say 'Oh, he's so ordinary'," Prince Charles told a high school audience today.

The Prince of Wales, attending a session of a student-run model Commonwealth conference, answered a series of informal questions from the floor in what became a relaxed open chat with the student delegates.

He told the group he feels he can live a fairly normal life in spite of being heir to the throne.

"A most important thing is to retain your sense of humor," he said. "If you lose that, and your ability to laugh at yourself, you're defeated."

A future king speaking about his view of monarchy said "the most important thing is to take an interest and a concern for other people."

He said a king must "seem to be interested and execute some form of leadership by concern for other people."

The students, awed at first by their royal visitor, soon relaxed as the soft-spoken prince joked and prodded them with questions.

Asked how he feels about becoming king, the prince said: "I think it's a fascinating job, I mean who could have a better one.

"I'm really looking forward to it."

He swirled through a program of waltzes at Government House Tuesday night, his last in Ottawa before leaving later today for the Northwest Territories.

The Prince of Wales, who has been charming ladies of all ages during his public appearances since his arrival Sunday, was equally gallant as guest of honor at a ball sponsored by Gov.-Gen. and Mme. Leger.

His first real public appearance occurred Tuesday following a formal visit to the Parliament Buildings, when he and Prime Minister Trudeau strolled down the Parliament Hill lawns between ranks of cheering spectators.

B.C.ers 'To Pay'

By HUMPHRY DAVY
Times Staff

British Columbians will pay heavily in future years for letting the Social Credit regime take the attitude "we know what's best for you," says Pat Kariel of Calgary, chairman of the western chapter of the Sierra Club of Canada.

"Entire forests have been drowned in the building of dams, railroads have destroyed the shoreline of some of your beautiful lakes and the Columbia project is proving to be a costly affair . . . and that's only half the story," Kariel said in an interview here Tuesday.

She said she didn't want to sound like an NDP-er "but you have been ripped off and you are to blame. You invited American companies to develop your resources, and then you subsidized them."

Kariel, who dubs herself an environmentalist activist, is a nurse and a sociologist. Her husband, Herbert, is a professor of geography at the University of Calgary, and chairman of the Calgary section of the Alpine Clu bof Canada.

She left Victoria Tuesday after presiding at a meeting of the western chapter, attended by Sierra representatives from the three Prairie provinces and British Columbia. They discussed environmental problems common to all four provinces.

She said one of the Sierra Club's major contributions was getting citizen participation in government decisions.

But public input on decision-making is not as effective as it should be.

"That's because the civil service is not organized to process input from people," she said. "It never had to do this."

Citizen groups are still not satisfied with the practice of governments making a decision behind closed doors, such as building a steel mill and then asking the public where it should be established.

She thinks people should have some say from the start.

"Maybe people don't want a steel mill," she added. "After all foreign countries today are trying to export their pollution.

"And then why should plans for building a hydro dam or establishing a provincial park be kept secret — secret as CIA files? It's ridiculous. It's our money they are going to use — not theirs."

She said citizen groups fighting environmental issues against big business in western Canada are handicapped from the start.

"First, they are all volunteers, have no paid secretaries or large funds at their disposal. Then if a government in power happens to be big business-oriented, it furnishes multi-national companies with all the information it needs.

"In Eastern Canada, wealthy people and some businesses contribute to the environmental cause. I don't know why. Perhaps because the East has an older tradition and older families."

Socred Office Opens Saturday In Oak Bay

North Okanagan MLA Pat Jordan will attend some time after 2 p.m .to declare the campaign centre in operation.

Hugh Curtis, the Socred member for Saanich and The Islands, opened an office at Lake Hill last week. Another Saanich SC headquarters will be opened later at Sidney.

In Victoria an office is being prepared for opening on Douglas opposite The Bay, and in Esquimalt at 941 Esquimalt Road.

ESQUIMALT TO STUDY TAXING HOUSEBOATS

Esquimalt council will look into the possibility of taxing houseboat residents in West Bay Marina in the face of a federal Ministry of Transport decision that floating homes need not be removed from the marina.

"Somehow or other we'll have to see they pay their fair share," Mayor Art Young said today.

The transport ministry was called in to advise the municipality after council realized it could not tax the boat residents who do use Esquimalt facilities.

Letters received by council and houseboat resident Jean Stewart this week from the ministry say the homes have as much right at the wharf as any other boats.

Library Amnesty Great Shakes

More than 12,000 overdue books were returned to Greater Victoria library branches last week in the last amnesty week for at least five years.

Director Donald Miller told library board members Tuesday that despite the success of the program in which overdue fines were forgiven, amnesty will not be held more frequently.

This was the library second amnesty week, the first was in 1970.

Some public opposition to the amnesty—discussed at the board meeting—centred on the library's rewarding overdue offenders with free McDonald's milkshakes for bringing in their books.

Two letters were received by the board from Victoria residents objecting to reward for the offence, and some members said they had heard similar complaints.

"We are trying to move out among the people where we think we belong," said Miller.

"If commerce wants to reward our patrons for returning books so that others can read them, so much the better."

"We don't impose fines to punish patrons but only in order to get the books back," said Miller.

Library board members also agreed Tuesday to raise borrowing charges for films and projectors.

Films are now borrowed free, with $5 paid for a projector. New fees will be $2 for films and $8 for a projector.

EX-ALDERMAN TO BE FETED

The people of Central Saanich are holding a dinner for former Ald. Tom Michell at the Brentwood Community Hall Saturday at 7 p.m.

The dinner is a community effort and will honor Michell who was a Central Saanich alderman for 14 years. He retired from public office last year.

Tickets for the dinner are $4.75 each and are available at municipal hall.

New Bill Aimed At Real Estate

Attorney-General Alex Macdonald intrduced legislation Tuesday which would make real estate and securities salesmen subject to the Mortgage Brokers Act regulations.

He said outside the legislature the bill would force such salesmen to file proper returns on mortgage transactions and abide by the code of ethics laid out in the Mortgage Brokers Act.

BEFORE THE JUDGE

A 17-year-old Duncan youth received a suspended sentence and one-year probation after pleading guilty in Victoria provincial court Tuesday to stealing a 10-speed bicycle.

Prosecutor Peter Birkett said Wayne Jim stole the bicycle from the playground at Langford Elementary school April 21.

"Don't you think it is better to work for a bicycle rather than stealing one?" Judge Harold Alder asked.

"But I'm laid of right now," Jim replied.

Donald Edwin Winfield, 47, of 329 Stelly's Crossroads, was sentenced to two weeks in jail for shoplifting a wallet Tuesday morning from Woodwards.

Winfield had pleaded guilty.

Only six days before, he had been fined $125 for shoplifting fishing tackle and a lantern from the same store.

Dr. D. K. McAdam approved an application by defence lawyer Michael Hutchison to adjourn a preliminary hearing on an attempted extortion charge to July 15 and 16.

James Hancock is charged with attempting to obtain $100,000 from a bank manager March 26.

Hancock, 33, of 1316 Rudlin, was committed by Alder to higher court for trial following a day-long preliminary hearing April 9 on an armed robbery charge.

The charge was laid after a $571 holdup March 22 at Beacon Drive-In, 126 Douglas.

Phone Cable Move Set

Canadian Overseas Telecommunication Corporation's underwater telephone cable is being rerouted from the busy La Perouse fishing bank off Vancouver Island.

The job is being done by the British cable ship Retriever, stationed in Hawaii and chartered by COTC to do the work.

The cable is being laid in deeper water approximately 20 to 30 miles south of La Perouse and should be completed this week, depending on weather conditions.

The work will cost about $1 million. Studies on the possibility of rerouting the cable began in 1973, Environment Canada and local fishing associations helping.

The COMPAC (Commonwealth Pacific) cable links Canada with Hawaii, Australia and New Zealand and went into operation in December, 1963.

It can handle 80 two-way telephone conversations and can also carry a mixture of telephone, telegraph and data servicing.

The rerouting was made necessary because of the numbers of breaks caused by increased fishing in the area.

The breaks disrupted Canada's communications with Pacific countries and were expensive to repair.

They were also costly to the commercial fishermen, causing loss of expensive anchoring and other gear, as well as fishing revenue.

In agreement with an international convention, the COTC has reimbursed fishermen for loss of gear on receipt of substantiated claims.

Submarine cables have crossed the La Perouse bank, about 45 nautical miles west of Vancouver Island, since 1902 when the first Pacific telegraph system was established. At that time it was the longest such system in the world, extending from Bamfield on Vancouver Island to Fanning Island in the mid-Pacific.

A more advanced cable system was established between the two points in 1962 and in 1950 the COTC, created to take over Canada's external telecommunications, took over the two operations.

The COMPAC was established in 1963 and operated virtually without a break until 1972 when large draggers searching for bottom fish and increased numbers of other fishing vessels began using the area.

Defence Grant To Author

Author John Windsor of Brentwood Bay has received a $4,500 grant from the Department of National Defence to examine how the armed forces militia could be revitalized.

In making application to the defence department for the grant, Windsor wrote that policy assuming any future war would be a push-button affair has tended to produce a professional armed force in Canada divorced from the public.

As a result, citizen interest and involvement in the country's defence has waned over the past two decades.

The reserve forces or militia were once considered the country's first line of defence, to be trained in time of need by the permanent force, Windsor argued. That is a task that the permanent force must be prepared to resume in a modified form.

Windsor said such a change in attitude would require re-education within the armed forces, government and public.

He will undertake what he estimated Tuesday would be a year-long research effort under three headings:

—an examination of the best means by which this re-education could be achieved.

—a review and recommendations on how army, navy and air force reserve units could best be revitalized to a meaningful role.

—a study of cadet and reserve formations to learn how they could be made more challenging to young men and women.

Windsor, 54, lost his sight when the tank he commanded was hit in the Italian campaign during the Second World War.

Since then he has authored four books and numerous articles and this spring he completed his master's degree in Canadian history at the University of Victoria.

LAST SMOKE FATAL

CALGARY (CP) — A terminal lung cancer patient whose only pleasure in life was cigarette smoking caused her own death by lighting a cigarette while on pure oxygen in a Calgary hospital last Christmas Eve, a coroners inquest jury here was told Tuesday.

The inquest was told that Elizabeth Suggitt had been warned by her doctors not to smoke unless her portable pure oxygen system was turned off.

Mrs. Suggitt normally called for a nurse to shut off the system, but when she lit a cigarette Christmas Eve she apparently forgot to make the call.

The pure oxygen exploded and the woman suffered third-degree burns over most of her body. She died four days later of her burns and advanced cancer of the lung and brian.

Man Held In Car Trunk

PONOKA, Alta. (CP) — An Edmonton man escaped without injury Tuesday morning following a seven-hour ordeal during which he was held in the trunk of his car after picking up two hitch-hikers.

RCMP said Donald Keeler of Edmonton was apparently abducted by two men after he offered them a ride near Airdrie, Alta., Monday night. The men first demanded money, then placed the driver in the trunk of the car, where he remained until 6 a.m. Tuesday when he escaped after the ca rstopped at a service station.

The two men, whose names have not been released, are to appear in court in Red Deer today pending charges.

Floods Expected

ESTEVAN, Sask. (CP)— Civic officials Tuesday were preparing for possible flooding as a spokesman for the provincial department of hydrology said flows in the Souris River were increasing in the River Park area on the outskirts of Estevan.

CIL Probe Sought

EDMONTON (CP) —Bob Clark, Alberta Social Credit House Leader, has called for an independent public inquiry into the CIL dynamite plant explosion in Calgary which killed six people Monday.

"With no disrespect to CIL, the inquiry, presided over by a judge, should look into all aspects of safety standards, inspection procedures and other pertinent situations in the plant," Clark said in a news release Tuesday.

72 Drug Charges

RED DEER (CP)—A total of 72 charges of drug trafficking have been laid in 13 Alberta communities following undercover operations by police during the last several months, the RCMP said Tuesday.

Grain Firm Fined

CALGARY (CP) — Pioneer Grain Co. Ltd. Tuesday was fined $3,000 for operating grain weigh scales which short-changed farmers in six southern Alberta communities.

The company pleaded guilty to six counts under the Weights and Measures Act after the department of consumer and corporate affairs tested the scales in October and December of last year.

Hold-up Pair Jailed

CALGARY (CP) — Two men who held the manager of a Turner Valley, Alta., bank and his family hostage last fall were sentenced to long prison terms Tuesday by an Alberta supreme court justice who said deterence and protection of society dictated his sentence.

Robert Brennan, 29, was sentenced to six years and Karsten Jensen, 20, was sentenced to five years for the incident.

Chief Justice J. V. H. Milvain disregarded pleas by Jensen's defence lawyer that the younger man should receive only a suspended sentence since he had no previous record and because of a good home life.

Employers Warned On Hiring

Victoria businessmen today were warned they could be taken to court if they hire non-Canadians.

Stan Purdy, Victoria manager of Canada Manpower, said the regulation against hiring non-Canadians (unless they are landed immigrants) has been in effect for some time but businessmen do not seem to be aware of the seriousness of the offense.

"A person taking a job illegally can be deported without appeal and the businessman hiring him can be taken to court."

Purdy said a foreign visitor who wants work in B.C. must apply to the Canada Manpower office. However, if there is any unemployed person anywhere in Canada who is available to fill that job, the application is refused.

"At times of high unemployment, it is almost impossible for a visitor to get a work permit."

With the present level of unemployment the federal government is being particularly vigilant about the laws against hiring non-Canadians, Purdy said.

Any employer who is in doubt about an employee should check with the Canada Manpower office or the department of immigration.

"The possession of a social insurance card is not a guarantee of anything," Purdy said.

"Unfortunately, anyone can get a social insurance card."

He said the problem was most acute in connection with young Americans. It was difficult to tell them from Canadians by their appearance and some of them may be taking casual jobs illegally.

Victoria Chamber of Commerce vice president Alan Emery said the chamber would make local merchants aware of the problem and urge them to be certain to check the validity of the applicant's work status.

In a separate statement, Emery also noted that there is just six months to go before merchants must remove third-party signs in Victoria. The signs must be removed by Oct. 1, the date the period of grace expires.

KINSMEN FORFEIT SLAMMED

Cancellation of a Kinsmen convention scheduled for Esquimalt's recreation centre will mean Greater Victoria loses out on a quarter of a million tourist dollars, says convention chairman Ray Rogers.

The B.C.-wide event will be held in Vancouver rather than Esquimalt May 15-19 after Rogers' request to Mayor Art Young that the centre — closed for the strike-lockout — be opened for the convention was refused.

"We can't just open it to any organization," said Young today.

He said despite the tourist revenue hinged on the 1,500-person convention, the principle that the lockout not be lifted was more important.

Since local groups were not being allowed to use the centre no one should be, he said.

Ald. Ken Hill agreed with Young and said today, "It wasn't long ago that a decision to lift the lockout was defeated."

But Ald. Larry Mann is angry Young made the decision without council's approval.

Young should have brought the letter to council April 7 — the same day he received it — even though the docket was already made up, said Mann.

The meeting of April 7 was the last chance council had to save the convention. Rogers needed a decision by April 10, said Young.

Rogers would have liked to see the lockout lifted for the four-day event but said he realizes the municipality's position.

He had been promised the use of the centre in May, 1974, for this first Victoria Kinsmen convention since a successful one in 1971.

"I would have a problem bringing a Kinsmen convention here again," he said because of Esquimalt's bad image from cancellation.

Municipal officials in March informed all groups who had booked the centre that alternate arrangements should be made, said Young.

He said even if the Kinsmen's shortage of time for convention re-arrangement was considered by council, garbage piled in the centre's parking lot would cause further problems.

Chinese Island Usurped

SAIGON — In all the drama of the present North Vietnamese offensive, hardly anybody noticed last week when the South Vietnamese government lost radio contact with its small garrison on the tiny atoll of Song Tu Tay, far out in the South China Sea in a group of barren sand spits known as the Spratly archipelago.

It was later confirmed that North Vietnamese ships had arrived to take over the island and that the flag of the Provisional Revolutionary Government (Viet Cong) now flies there.

The incident would have little interest except for the fact that, on Peking's maps, the Spratlys belong to China and by planting a flag there Hanoi would appear to be stealing a march on their fraternal Communist brothers and benefactors in Peking. The move also forstalls any chance of other countries taking advantage of a vacuum to take the island.

The Spratlys lie closer to the Philippines and Malaysia than they do to Vietnam but the Vietnamese lay claim to the atolls because the French incorporated them into their administration of Indochina in 1933.

The Spratlys, like the Paracels further to the north, were of interest to no one, save a few fishermen, until January of 1974.

Their only commercial value were Guano deposits. The possibility of oil in the South China Sea makes them more desirable but the issue between China and Vietnam over the islands appears to be one of national pride more than commercial advantage.

In January of last year the Saigon government sent a naval force to the Paracels to beef up the tiny garrison they had on one of the islands and perhaps to occupy some of the other islands. The Chinese reacted violently and sent troops and planes to overwhelm the South Vietnamese and several of Saigon's war ships were sunk. The Paracels lie about equidistant from the Chinese and Vietnamese coasts.

The Chinese extolled their great victory in defence of the Chinese motherland and the South Vietnamese, with equal vigor, protested the "illegal military occupation" of islands belonging to the Vietnamese fatherland.

Saigon won a propaganda victory of sorts over Hanoi by calling upon all Vietnamese of what ever political persuasion to denounce the occupation of Vietnamese soil. The North Vietnamese, who depend on China for much of their war material, issued a vague, ambigious statement and lapsed into an embarrassed silence.

The Chinese have never made a move toward the Spratlys further south, but they remain on Chinese maps as Chinese territory. Shortly after the Paracels affair, the Philippines and Taiwan took advantage of the situation to send small garrisons to separate islands in the Spratly archipelago. The South Vietnamese have long had a garrison there.

Now, however, it belongs to the Provisional Revolutionary Government, and it will be interesting to see how the other powers who have an interest in the Spratlys react.

Pollution Abatement Plan Set

OTTAWA (CP)—The federal government will contribute up to $30 million over the next five years to help industry develop new pollution abatement programs, Environment Minister Jeanne Sauve announced Monday.

The program is called the development and demonstratoin of pollution abatement technology program (DPAT) and provides for contractual cost-sharing arrangements with industry.

The federal government will provide a share of capital and operating costs under the program.

Sauve said top priorities will be given to the most severe air and water pollution problems.

To qualify for the program, an industrial contractor must be able to develop and demonstrate either a process that significantly reduces pollution or a new technology for containing or capturing pollution from a current process.

The contractor must make any process or control technology developed with DPAT assistance freely available in Canada.

Planning Problems For Viet Refugees

WASHINGTON (WP) — With time running out in Saigon, the Ford administration has only begun taking the first steps toward planning for the arrival of what it estimates could be as many as 200,000 Vietnamese refugees.

The first problem confronting the Inter-agency Task Force on Vietnam, established by the White House on Friday, is that it has no idea of how many refugees may be coming to this country from Vietnam. "The facts of the situation, how it turns out, that's what's going to decide it — how many people get out," one government official working on the task force said Monday.

The task force, headed by former career diplomat L. Dean Brown, has no resettlement sites selected for the refugees, has not contacted state and local agencies that may have to provide services for the refugees and has not contacted private agencies that may be called upon to help in the effort, according to sources.

The task force's problems are compounded by a certain restlessness within Congress over the prospect of large numbers of Vietnamese coming into the U.S. under the attorney general's authority to "parole" persons into the country in emergency situations.

Last week, after public and private hearings with Philip C. Habib, assistant secretary of state for East Asian and Pacific Affairs, the Senate Judiciary Committee wrote Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger and Attorney General Edward H. Levi to endorse the "limited use" of Levi's authority to permit orphans and alien dependents of American citizens into the U.S.

The committee said it also would "welcome consideration" of use of the parole authority to facilitate the immigration of "certain" Vietnamese nationals to join their families already in this country. "However," the letter continued, "prior to the use of the parole authority . . . for the purpose for large-scale evacuation and resettlement of Vietnamese nationals, the committee will require such recommendations in writing and daily consultations on this important matter of public policy until further notice."

Habib's testimony before the Senate Judiciary Committee was only one of a series of appearances by him and Kissinger during which they were questioned about possible emigration of large numbers of Vietnamese refugees to the United States.

During his Senate Judiciary Committee appearance last Tuesday, Habib told the committee in closed session that the administration was thinking in terms of 200,000 Vietnamese refugees, a staff source said.

Habib mentioned several countries — Australia, France, Brazil, Venezuela — that might take refugees. "He sort of talked about conversations, he never mentioned commitments. He talked about spreading these people around the world," this source said.

"The committee to a man was skeptical of the whole process," the source said. "I think they're skeptical about the numbers. I think they're skeptical about who is coming out (from Vietnam). I think they're skeptical about how these people will be taken care of. We can go down the list of two dozen questions."

This source said the committee felt that 5,000 or 10,000 persons can be absorbed in this country. "But if you're talking about 200,000 people, that's a hell of a lot of people."

Quality of Strings Impresses Festival Judges

By AUDREY JOHNSON
Times Staff

Quality of string playing, particularly violin, in the Victoria Music Festival continues to impress adjudicator John Tellaisha.

Marks in the nineties were distributed with fair consistency throughout string sessions Tuesday at Oak Bay Junior Secondary. These included a 90 to Greater Victoria Schools Senior Orchestra strings and a 92 to the Greater Victoria Schools Symphony Orchestra.

Highest mark of the day was won by violinist Hilary Wallis for her junior sonata performance. She was awarded 95. Runner-up Mark Neumann was pretty good, too. He got 91.

Others were David Sabey, 92, for open violin solo (runner-up was Shawny Sage with 88), and Mark Rodgers who gained a 93 for intermediate cello concerto.

A highlight performance of all the string sessions and a rare one, was that of Karen Himmelman, sole entrant in the harp class. A talented and skillful performer, she was awarded a mark of 94.

Adult vocal classes at First United, for the second evening in a row, made for delightful listening. What is particulary interesting is that the competition is stiff this year and when a singer tops a class he or she has the satisfaction of realizing that the rivalry has been keen.

Brian Benn, for example, winner of the male oratorio, had two quite outstanding contestants in Robert Hazard and Michael Eckford.

The Bach sacred solo class, open to any voice, was won by Robin Powell, closely followed by Pierann Moon. But the crown of the evening was undoubtedly the concert group class, again open to any voice.

The first 90 marking Frances Wickberg had given — "It's very difficult to get a 90 from me" — distinguished this class.

Pierann Moon collected three of them; 90 for each of the three songs she had sung. Runner-up Robin Powell got two and an 89.

Mrs. Wickberg said that choice was very important in presenting a concert group and that all the five singers in this class had chosen well for their particular voices.

"Often my pencil forgot to write while I just sat back and enjoyed what I was hearing," she said.

Pianist partners Jocelyn Abbott (Pierann), Grace Timp, Robert Holliston, Donna Nutini and Anne Crose (Robin), also received warm accolades from Mrs. Wickberg.

Tonight's session promises more of the same quality and anyone who cares in the least about vocal music should take heed. The female operatic class sees a return of all these singers and the French art song class has also attracted the best of the male and female singers.

Speech art sessions continue tonight and Thursday at Newcombe Auditorium where they end Thursday with an honor program at 8 p.m.

Choral classes end today at Christ Church Cathedral hall. Piano, which has overflowed into two halls for 10 days, begin there and at Newcombe on Friday.

Accordion ended Tuesday evening with a senior championship program as a result of which Rolf Gilstein will represent Victoria at the Provincial Music Festival in May.

Today and this evening at Blanshard Elementary Highland and national dance classes are taking place. The evening sessions begin at 7:30.

Vocal and string classes continue Thursday and the string championships take place starting at 7:30 p.m. when more provincial representatives will be chosen.

Crepes Play Varied Role

Paper thin pancakes, also called crepes, have maintained their popularity through the years and no wonder — they are easy to prepare and can be stored in the freezer with wax paper between each cake until needed. They can play many a mealtime role from breakfast to supper as a main dish, entree or dessert.

You'll want to try some of these pancake recipes and no doubt you'll come up with ideas for fillings that will help to use up those mealtime leftovers that none of us can ignore in these days of spiralling food prices.

Basic Crepe Recipe

1 cup flour
¼ teaspoon sifto salt
2 eggs
1½ to 1¾ cups milk
2 tablespoons vegetable oil

Sift flour and salt into a bowl. Make a well in the centre and add the eggs. Add 1½ cups of milk gradually and beat mixture to form a smooth batter. Beat 1-2 minutes. Stir in oil. Cover batter and refrigerate for 1 hour. The batter will thicken slightly during this resting period. Thin with additional milk to form a batter the consistency of cream.

To Make Crepes

To Season Pan: Pour salt into the crepe pan to about ¼ inch depth. Place pan over a medium to high heat for 10 minutes. Discard salt and wipe out crepe pan with a dry cloth.

To Oil Pan: Tie several thicknesses of cloth over the handle end of a wooden spoon. Pour about ¼ cup of vegetable oil into a custard cup. Dip cloth covered spoon into oil then rub oil soaked cloth over base of crepe pan.

Heat pan over a medium-high heat until a drop of batter sizzles upon contact with the pan. Pour 2-3 tablespoons of batter into pan. Rotate pan evenly so pan is coated evenly with batter. Cook until edges turn faint golden; 20-30 seconds. Turn crepe with a spatual. Cook other side for 10-15 seconds. Turn out onto a plate. Continue cooking crepes in the same way, oiling the pan as necessary. Keep cooked crepes warm by stacking them one on top of another. Cover with a colander and place in a warm oven.

Cream Sauce

4 tablespoons butter
6 tablespoons flour
2 cups chicken stock
1 teaspoons lemon juice
1 cup 35 per cent cream
½ teaspoon Sifto salt
¼ teaspoon white pepper

In a saucepan, melt butter, mix in the flour and cook over a medium heat for 30 seconds. Remove from heat and gradually blend in chicken stock to form a smooth sauce. Return to heat and bring to a boil, stirring constantly; boil for 1-2 minutes. Stir in lemon juice, ½ cup cream, salt and pepper and bring back to a boil. Use a half of this sauce to mix with the meat or fish. Thin the remaining sauce with the rest of the cream and use to spoon over the rolled, stuffed crepes.

Cooking Potatoes Not All That Easy

By MARY MOORE

Potatoes do not get enough attention from me. I guess that many food editors take it for granted that everybody knows how to cook them. I found out that this is not so. Many old cooks leave lumps in their mashed, undercook baked and darken their boiled.

So today is cooking potato day.

BAKED POTATOES

Scrub potatoes until skin is eating clean. Dry and prick with a sharp-tined fork. Bake at 425 deg. Fahr. 60 to 70 minutes — time depends on size.

Crosscut top and fill with one of these seasoned butters: (1) onion butter: Cream 1-3 cup soft butter or margarine with 1½ teaspoons grated onion; (2) horseradish butter: Cream 1-3 cup soft butter or margarine with 1 tablespoon drained horseradish; (3) herb butter: Cream 1-3 cup soft butter or margarine with ¼ teaspoon each basil, tarragon and thyme.

BOILED POTATOES

Scrub and pare potatoes and cut into quarters. Have ¾" water boiling with 1 teaspoon salt. Add potatoes, cover, bring to boil, reduce heat and simmer covered, until fork tender — 20 to 25 minutes. Drain if any water remains. Pour over them 2 tablespoons melted butter to which you have added two tablespoons chopped parsley or ½ teaspoon dill weed.

MASHED POTATOES

Wash and pare four large potatoes and cut into quarters. Have ¾" water boiling with 1 teapsoon salt. Add potatoes, cover, bring to boil, reduce heat and simmer covered until very tender. Drain if any water remains. Mash or beat with electric mixer until NO lumps remain. (Be a pro—do not leave any lumps.) Add 1 cup warm milk, ¼ cup butter or margarine, 1 teaspoon salt and beat over low heat until fluffy and hot.

GINGER BEEF

GINGER BEEF
(Made with leftover roast)

cut into thin strips,
½ poudn rare roast beef,
½ poudn rare roast beef,
cut into thin strips,
¼ cup soy sauce,
1 teaspoon finely minced garlic,
1 to 2 teaspoons grated or finely chopped ginger root,
1 teaspoon peanut, vegetable or corn oil.

Place the meat in a mixing bowl and add the soy sauce, garlic and ginger. Cover and let stand several hours.

Heat the oil in a wok or skillet and cook the meat, stirring, over high heat about 10 seconds. Turn off the heat and continue stirring about 30 seconds longer. Serve with rice.

Yield: Two to four servings.

Linking Food and Fun

By WILLIAM RICE
The Washington Post

When food and fun are linked, something that happens far too rarely these days, it is most easily done with pasta. That culinary chameleon with a hundred shapes has become a victim of shortage and inflation, sometimes scarce and, when found again, priced higher.

Yet pasta, along with salads and pates, continues to be among the few foods that can serve the cause of food economy one night and be dressed up to entertain company the next.

Pasta should be cooked in a large quantity of water (six quarts or more to a pound). A pound can serve four, sometimes six, as a first course. The water should be at a rolling boil and salt added just before the pasta. Some cooks add a tablespoon or so of oil as well to help prevent strands from sticking together.

When pasta is cooked but still firm to the bite, remove pot from heat and pour a cup of cold water into it to stop boiling. The pasta should be drained but not rinsed (rinsing causes loss of nutrients and heat) and placed in a warm bowl or platter.

Sauces are even more varied than the types of pasta. Tomato is only a beginning. Meat isn't necessary. The best are simple and therefore demand quality products. Freshly grated cheese and freshly ground pepper are not gourmet pretentions. They taste better and help make other expensive ingredients unnecessary.

SPICY CARBONARA

2 slices bacon (thickly cut)
½ pound spaghetti
1 small onion or 2 shallots, finely chopped
1 tablespoon chopped parsley
1 teaspoon red wine vinegar
1 small, hot pepper, finely chopped or ⅛ teaspoon cayenne pepper
Salt and freshly ground black pepper to taste
2 tablespoons grated Parmesan cheese
2 egg yolks

Fry bacon until nearly cooked. Remove and cut into small pieces. As pasta cooks, saute onion in bacon drippings until softened. Add parsley, vinegar, green pepper or cayenne and bacon pieces. When thoroughly heated, pour over just drained pasta and toss. Season with salt and pepper, toss again with cheese and then egg yolks (heat of the pasta will cook the yolks without making them firm). Serve at once with extra cheese on the side.

SPAGHETTI WITH SAUSAGE AND TOMATOES

Serves 4
1 pound Italian sausage, cut into small pieces
3 medium onions, chopped
1 pound mushrooms
3 cups canned tomatoes
1 teaspoon salt
1-3 teaspoon pepper
1 pound spaghetti
4 ripe olives, pitted and chopped

Fry sausage, drain off most of fat. Add onions and brown well. Add mushrooms, brown lightly and add tomatoes, salt and pepper. Let simmer over low fire until thickened.

While sauce is simmering, cook spaghetti in rapidly boiling water until tender, drain and place in oiled baking dish. Add olives to sauce, pour over spaghetti and mix well. Bake in oven at 325 degrees for 30 minutes.

Silly? Not at All

Remember the silly millimetre? Actually a millimetre is not silly at all. In fact as a way to measure length is makes a lot of sense.

Although a millimetre is very small, ten millimetres together make one centimetre and 1 centimetre is 0.4 inch or slightly less than half an inch.

The familiar 8-inch square cake pan is a 20 centimetre square. And the cookie dough should be rolled to 6 millimetre thickness instead of ¼-inch.

Curry That Doesn't Blow Your Head Off

By TINY BENNETT

For a long time now I have been working to set the spice and seasoning level of curry dishes to a point where they enhance the dish, rather than blow your head off with a roaring burn.

This is not an easy task, because most of us have been fooled into believing that true Indian curries must be extremely hot to be authentic.

However, I have travelled extensively in India and Pakistan and I know this is not true. In the south of India I have eaten curries so hot that they made me gasp. It would be foolish to serve a dish like this at home. In north India, around Lahore, and in much of Pakistan, I've eaten dishes that were almost bland and yet were gloriously flavored. And this is what I pursued in my home kithcen.

Happily I can now report that I just reached what I believe to be the correct level for most palates and when I served an authentic Pakistan four-course meal to house guests, even my Pakistani friends were loud in praise.

This cooking style is fun to prepare and serve and makes a welcome change from what we usually eat. Best of all it is an economical system that beautifully handles the cheaper cuts of meat and forms a super way of using up leftovers.

In writing this column, I am aware that many readers conform to diet laws of a religious nature but this food very nicely overcomes these problems. My basic curry can be produced from beef, lamb, chicken or even fish, and where most curry recipes call for the meat to be fried in ghee (clarified butter) I've used a Kosher shortening and found it so good that I now use Crisco all the time. This will cover Muslim, Hindu and Jewish dietary requirements.

My four-course meal was composed of beef curry, dried curried cauliflower with onions, mushrooms and potatoes, spiced fried rice with peas and a gorgeous roti, or bread called puris that is unleavened, made from a mix of wholewheat and white flour and fried into lovely puffs that split lengthwise and are wonderful to mop up food.

Using cross rib beef on special at 85 cents a pound, the entire meal for five cost $4.77 — or 95 cents per head.

One should never serve wine with these foods, as they spicy flavor kills even the most robust wine. Beer and ale however go very well but I prefer cold water, followed by a mint tea made in a special Corey I keep just for brewing quality loose tea such as Darjeelin.

The cooking timing for this food is less vital than in Chinese foods that need marginal heat and are ruined by even a fraction of overcooking. While the meat curry can be pre-prepared and then re-heated, the puris must be served hot, crisp and fresh from the pan, so time must be arranged for this lovely bread to be cooked last.

Here then in sequence is now to cook:

BEEF CURRY: Cut two pounds of inexpensive, not too lean beef into bite-sized hunks. In a heavy pot, melt four tablespoons Crisco or butter, and saute on teaspoon fine chopped garlic, one chopped medium-size onion and ½ teaspoon of ground red chilies. Into one tablespoon curry powder add enough vinegar to make a thick paste, add this to the ingredients in the pot, stir well and cook over low heat for five minutes. Add the beef, a little salt, a small amount of consomme or water, then simmer covered for one hour. Now add a six-ounce carton of plain, skim milk yogurt, mix well, cover again and simmer until the beef is really tender, stirring gently from time to time. It takes about 2½ hours but do it in advance, take off the heat and re-heat, for your planned dinner time.

PURIS: This lovely authentic bread is fried just before serving but since it calls for a lot of kneading, is prepared well in advance and kneaded from time to time. In a bowl mix four tablespoons wholewheat flour with four tablespoons white flour, add one teaspoon salt and mix into a hole in the centre two teaspoons melted butter. Add water in little dribbles to get to stiff dough, it will take a bit less than 2-3 cup of warm water, then knead in your hands until it is soft, pliable and has become springy. I find it takes at least 20 minutes, so I wander around kneading it in my hands while I chat to guests or watch TV. Or, if I have to do something else, I put it down, and come back to it and give it more treatment. Now I know why one of the common sights in a village in Pakistan is a woman kneading bread in her hands.

About 30 minutes before dinner time, put a slug of light cooking oil in a heavy skillet, tear off walnut-sized hunks of puris, roll in the hands into a round ball and then roll very thin and perfectly round. Drop in one at a time into the very hot oil and at once splash hot oil over the top, brown one side, turn, press down flat, spalsh oil over the top unfil the underside is brown and remove to a hot dish until all are ready. They rise up like crazy, rather like the Arab bread pita.

SPICED RICE AND PEAS: Into a pot pour two cups of consomme, water or water with a beef cube added, two teaspoons salt and several dashed of turmeric, bring to the boil and then slowly trickly in one cup rice, shake to level, clamp on a tight lid and turn down to low heat. Do this one hour before dinner time. Twenty minutes before dinner add half a large can of peas, drained, stir in gently, cover and keep over a low heat, stirring from the bottom now and then to prevent the rice from sticking.

DRY CURRIED CAULIFLOWER: In a deep skillet or pot with a lid, melt two tablespoons butter or Crisco, fry up one medium onion thinly sliced with one teaspoon dried ginger and then add 1½ teaspoons turmeric and mix well. Add one head of cauliflower thinly sliced with some stalk retained on the slices, four small potatoes, peeled and sliced thin, a handful of sliced mushrooms, the other half of the large can of peas well drained and fry for 10 minutes turning gently to coat all with the turmeric. Now add two teaspoons salt, ½ teaspoon chili powder, cover and cook, turning over now and then, until the vegetables are fork tender. This takes about 35-40 minutes on low heat. Remove the lid, scatter over ½ teaspoon curry powder, turn up the heat slightly and dry it out. Remove from the heat and keep hot.

Tangerine Cottage Cheese Salad

If a survey were taken of homemakers' lunch menus, it would probably reveal that more often than not it is a makeshift affair. The responses might go, "Lunch? I usually throw together a sandwich of whatever's hand."

"I munch on bits and pieces of leftovers."

"Just some cottage cheese or yogurt."

"Oh, once in awhile I open a can of soup."

"Balance nutrition? I'm careful with my kids or husband's lunch, but, oh well, it's too much trouble to take for just myself.

Why not treat yourself as special as you do your family — even once or twice a week? Here is a low calorie, nutritious and delicious salad that you can whip together for yourself in a flash.

TANGERINE COTTAGE CHEESE SALAD
(2 servings)

1 large tangerine, peeled, separated into segments, seeded

1 cup small curd creamed cottage cheese

1 tablespoon chopped green onion.

Salad greens

Set aside several tangerine segments for garnish.

Cut remaining segments into bite-size pieces to yield approximately ½ cup. Gently mix together tangerine pieces, cottage cheese, and onion. Arrange on salad greens and top with reserved segments. Serve with crisp crackers or bread sticks.

Angelica Reduces Acidity Of Spring Symbol: Rhubarb

HILDA BEASTALL

The red stems of rhubarb have been pushing up through garden soils all over the Victoria area. Canadians like rhubarb. As a nation it is probably because it is a symbol of early spring.

Now, with increased awareness of the need to cut down on the vast national consumption of sugar, we take a close look at this fruit to see how its healthful attributes compare before and after cooking.

First let us remember being very young and happily chewing on the end of raw rhubarb stems as they were prepared for deep dish pies. The flavor may have been sharp but certainly not unbearable or we should never have been on hand to beg the rounded butt ends of stalks.

In the nutrient value bulletin (Canada) from Department of National Health and Welfare, rhubarb rates high in food values when raw, having few calories and low carbohydrate rating. It contains even a little protein; calcium is high and iron fair as fruits go. Vitamin A and C are present in moderate quantities.

Sweetened and cooked, calories and carbohydrates soar with the abundance of sugar that most Canadians demand; the protein, calcium, iron, vitamins A and C all are depleted considerably.

Prepared with methods other than huge quantities of sugar, we can make palatable dishes that would kep the calories and carbohydrates down to a usable level. I would like to see an analysis made for nutritional values when lemon juice and angelica leaves are used in place of most of the sugar.

A first step in preparation of rhubarb with less sugar is to use a minimum of water. Boil gently four cups of sliced rhubarb, its bright red skin intact for color and flavor; use one tablespoon of water to start the juices.

Then add the juice and pulp of half a lemon and a quarter cup of demerara sugar. Return to simmering point for a couple of minutes then remove from heat and cool.

Serve over a mound of cottage cheese, or in a bowl with a quarter cup of thick homemade yogurt to each serving. These unsweet dairy additions reduce the tartness of the rhubarb.

An entirely different way for most homemakers is the reducing of fruit acidity with the use of angelica leaves, an herb which can be grown locally although difficult to get started.

Since mentioning this herb last year and finding it not available, I have heard of a supply of young angelica plants at a local herb farm, and also some quantity of dried leaves.

Either fresh leaves and young stems of angelica or the dried leaf in a powdered form takes the sourness from fruits such as rhubarb, green apples, green tomatoes, even reducing the amount of sugar needed in making raspberry and other berry pies.

By reducing the sugar it is to be hoped more of the original fruit value is retained. At least the calories and carbohydrates don't soar.

For a rhubarb pie using four cups of chopped red rhubarb, add one tablespoon of chopped fresh angelica leaf with hte stem or one teaspoon of dried powdered leaf. Use also a tablespoon of lemon juice and two tablespoons of demerara sugar.

The angelica does not sweeten the fruit; it reduces the tartness (or acidity) to an acceptable level without impairing the fruit flavor. It seems to smooth it out.

A way to get more natural sweetness in rhubarb is to pull the stems from the garden plants after the leaves are fully expanded. Plentiful sunshine on the expanded leaves converts some of the plant's acidity into natural sugars, thus giving better flavor still, together with less acidity.

When growing your own plants this plan can be followed.

A recipe from the north of England suggests using a small amount of cocoa in place of sugar for rhubarb desserts.

While I have played around with the original recipe, we don't like cocoa well enough to try this ourselves, but many people love cocoa and this method is worth a trial with half quantities of the following ingredients.

RHUBARB PUDDING

1 cup wholewheat flour
2 tsp baking powder
2 tsp cocoa
pinch of salt
¼ cup chopped dates
1 tbsp demerara sugar
4 tbsp soft margarine
½ cup milk (from powdered skim)
3 cups finely cut rhubarb

Mix all ingredients (except rhubarb) in mixisg bowl, making a thick batter. Add the chopped rhubarb and spoon into a greased casserole.

Bake in fairly hot 190 deg. C. oven from 30 to 40 minutes until rhubarb is fork tender and crust is lightly browned.

Serve hot. Some people like a slice of cheddar cheese with rhubarb pie so try it with this pudding.

Rhubarb stewed with only a spoonful of water, a piece of lemon or orange peel, a spoonful of angelica leaf and a tablespoon of sugar is also good combined with a sweet fruit such as bananas.

Canned apricots are nearly always far too sweet with their 45 per cent sugar syrup, but would no doubt combine well with rhubarb gently stewed with lemon. Try this without additional sugar at first.

Once you get used to the idea that less sugar is needed with rhubarb than previously thought necessary, you will think of ways to combine this fruit with other foods to make it useful as a food and palatable to the taste.

If you have a garden, make a point of growing a plant of the herb angelica along with your rhubarb plants; the leaves and stems will be handy too when making berry pies a little later in the season, thus cutting down on sugar all through the season.

SOUNDS AWFUL—TASTES GREAT

LOUISIANA GUMBO

1-3 cup plus 1 tablespoon lard, salad oil or bacon fat,
10 tablespoons flour,
½ cup chopped onion,
1 cup chopped green pepper,
1 cup chopped celery,
1 10-ounce package sliced frozen okra.,
Salt and freshly ground pepper to taste,
3½ cups boiling chicken broth,
¼ pound Polish (garlic) sausage cut into ½-inch slices,
¼ cup water,
1 hot red pepper, crushed,
¾ cup peeled, cooked shrimp, cut into half-inch pieces,
1½ cups cooked shredded chicken, white or dark meat,
Gumbo-file powder, optional.

Use a Dutch oven, preferably made of cast iron. Add one-third cup fat and the flour. Stir constantly with a wooden spoon until the flour is uniformly brown, 15 minutes or longer. The flour should achieve a dark caramel or light chocolate color, but care must be taken not to burn the flour or it will take on a bitter taste. Cook slowly and stir constantly.

Add the onion and cook about two minutes, stirring. Add the green pepper and celery and cook, stirring occasionally, about 15 minutes.

Meanwhile, heat the remaining tablespoon of fat and add the okra. Cook, stirring, about 15 minutes and sprinkle with salt and pepper. Add this to the Dutch oven. Add the broth.

Simmer the Polish sausage in the water about three minutes. Drain. Add this to the Dutch oven. Add the remaining ingredients except file powder and stir. Simmer 15 minutes. Serve hot with rice and file powder in the side.

Yield: Four to six servings.

PAINLESS WAY TO SAVE CASH

By MARIAN BURROS
The Washington Post

Want a quick, painless way to save money? It's so simple it must be either illegal or immoral, say skeptics, while cynics claim it can't be done at all.

Admittedly, a certain amount of self-control is required. You have to promise yourself when you go grocery shopping that you will bypass all the add-the-main-ingredient-dinner boxes, the seasoned and flavored frozen vegetable combinations, the pie crust mixes and the seasoned coatings for meat, poultry and fish.

Then you will have to give an average of 10 minutes more per day to kitchen activity.

It's an average, because some days you may spend 20 minutes preparing your own convenience products; other days you will be able to use what you had previously prepared.

How you go about cutting back on the convenience products you buy will depend on family preferences. Here are some typical examples:

—Make your own pie-crust mix instead of buying the prepared mixes. If you make one crust a week from own mix, you will save about $13.50 a year.

—Make your own batter mix for coating chicken, instead of using Batter 'n' bake or Crisp 'n' Tender, once a week and save about $11.50 a year. Use biscuit mix, paprika, garlic and onion powders.

—Combine frozen peas and onions yourself instead of buying the frozen combination (you'll need 1½ to 2 packages for a family of four); combine frozen green beans with slivered almonds. Do both once a week and in a year you can save from $34 to $46. Other combinations done at home yield similar savings.

—Combine your own ingredients to make a dinner in a dish instead of buying hamburger helper and you can save $15 to $21 a year. You can find out what ingredients to use by reading the labels of the prepared products, leaving out the chemical additives.

The amount of time added to food preparation will be minimal; the number of additives no longer consumed will be considerable; and the quantity (and quality) of additional nutrients you will be getting will be spectacular.

PASTRY MIX
Makes 8 to 9 cups

6 cups sifted flour
1 tablespoon salt
1 (1 pound) can vegetable shortening
(about 2½ cups)

Mix flour and salt in large bowl. Cut in shortening until mixture resembles coarse meal. Cover and store mix in cool place. (It does not require refrigeration.)

dear abby

'Out With the Boys'

DEAR ABBY: Paul (not his real name) and I have been married for 22 years, and I must say he has been an ideal husband and father. He is loving, sober, generous, and considerate.

About a year ago, Paul started going out every Wednesday night — "with the boys" — or so he says. He never mentions any of the "boys" by name, and I know of no one in our circle of friends who goes with him.

My problem is that Paul refuses to say where he goes — and with whom.

We can never make any plans for Wednesday night, because that is Paul's night out.

Abby, this not knowing where he goes is slowly driving me to distraction. My demands that he tell me, or to cease going, have gotten me nowhere.

I am seriously considering hiring a private detective to follow him, but wonder what harm it could do to our marriage if Paul is innocent of any wrong-doing, and learns that I've had him followed.

What is your advice?—Doubting Dodo.

DEAR DOUBTING: Grow up. You don't have to know where your husband is every minute of his life. Isn't an adult man (or woman) entitled to some real personal freedom without being held accountable for his time 24 hours a day? And wouldn't the hiring of a private detective be the ultimate assault on that freedom, and an insult as well?

If you want to ruin your ideal marriage, just continue to "demand" that your otherwise perfect husband give you an hourly accounting of his time. Or have him followed.

DEAR ABBY: I have recently started to give private piano lessons to young children, and I am planning my first recital.

Since most of my students' parents have never heard me play, would it be all right for me to play a number or two myself on the program? Or do you think it woud be considered sowing off on my part?

Maybe an experienced piano teacher has the answer. —Perplexed Pianist.

DEAR PERPLEXED: Maybe. And I would welcome their letters. My experience is limited to my own violin recitals. My instructor, Leo Kucinckl, a very talented violinist in his own right, did not perform at the recitals of his pupils. But in retrospect, perhaps he should have. He would have inspired his pupils ,and entertained their parents.

DEAR ABBY: My father is 59, and a retired coal miner on disability.

He bought U.S. Savings bonds years ago throug hthe payroll office, and kept them at home. Our house burned down 25 years ago, and all the bonds were destroyed. Dad never had copies of the bond numbers.

Is there any way he can trace these numbers? Everyone we talked to says we should forget it.—Mrs. P.

DEAR MRS. P.: Don't forget it. Your father should contact his local bank, or the nearest Federal Reserve Bank, and request Form PD 1048.

He should then contact his former employer to help in filling out this form, as sometimes the payroll offices keep records of the serial numbers and dates. Your father should fill out the form in duplicate, keep one copy for himself and send the other to the Bureau of Public Debt (the address is on the form).

It may take a while, but eventually your father will get his bonds.

Protest Planned

ITHACA, N.Y. (AP) — The American Indian Movement will try to "blow out the birthday candle" of the U.S. Bicentennial, an AIM leader said Monday. He did not say what form the action would take.

Diet That Can End Lose-and-Gain Cycles

By DR. JEAN MAYER

The next time you decide to lose weight, why not do it on a diet that is tailor-made for you alone, that considers not only your personal calorie needs, but respects your needs for the many nutrients?

Why not select a diet that is healthy and balanced, and, best of all, works so well that when you have lost those pounds, you can follow it as a lifetime eating pattern?

In short, how about a diet that could end forever the lose-and-gain cycles — what I call the "rhythm method of girth control"?

An impossible dream? No, not at all. All you need is a good calorie-counter, an inexpensive kitchen scale, and these basic precautions:

● Don't go on a crash diet. A steady loss of about two pounds a week is better for your health and makes it more likely that you will stay reduced once you get there. (Actually, a pound a week would be even better — and that amounts to 52 pounds a year! Trouble is, most people are too impatient.)

● Don't go on an unbalanced diet, such as the Atkins, Stillman, Calories Don't Count, Drinking Man's diets, or on a diet such as the nothing-but-rice, "Duke" diet. None of them is healthy. In the long run you (hopefully) will not stay on them. Moreover, once you have lost those pounds on one of these "gimmick" diets and go back to your "normal" diet, you are more likely to fall back into the eating habits that led you to gain weight in the first place.

● Finally, you cannot escape counting calories. There is no way of circumventing the law of nature that says that the accumulation of 3,500 "extra" calories will add one pound of body fat. Conversely, if over a period you eat 3,500 less than you expend, you will lose a pound of fat.

Let's start with how many calories you need each day. That depends on your weight goal. For each pound of your ideal weight, if you are under 45 years old, write down 10 calories (if you're a woman) and 11 calories (if you're a man).

If you're over 45, allow 9 and 10 calories respectively. That is the amount of energy you will need each day for basal metabolism: breathing, heart beat, temperature control, digestion.

To this number, add one-half as much again. This will cover the energy you need for your minimum daily activity (assuming that you move about and do not just sit all day).

The total represents the calories you will need to maintain your new weight once you reach it. Since they are fewer than you are now consuming, you can begin by putting yourself on a reducing diet. Don't, however, cut your total daily calorie consumption below 1,200 for a woman, 1,600 for a man, or 1,400 for an adolescent girl. If you do, you will almost certainly not be getting all the nutrients you need.

The next step is to plan varied meals, using the calorie counter, so that you stay within the calorie limit (remember, water is the only substance that has no calories), and still get all the 40 or so essential nutrients you need to stay healthy while you reduce. That is not as difficult as it sounds.

Just take the basic seven food groups as a guide. That means (1) one daily serving of leafy, green or yellow vegetables. (2) At least one serving of citrus fruits, tomatoes, cabbage, or salad greens. (3) At least one serving of potatoes or other vegetables and fruits. (4) At least one serving of milk or a milk product. (5) Two servings of dried beans and peas, nuts, eggs, poultry, fish, or meat. (6) Two servings of whole-grain breads, cereals, and products made with whole grains. (7) Optional: one serving of butter, margarine or polyunsaturated oils.

And here is where the scale comes in. "Serving" means whatever size portion is listed in your calorie counter. More dieters have failed because no attention was paid to the size of the portion than for any other reason. If it says a three-ounce piece of fish, it means three ounces, not six (that's twice as many calories). So be sure to weigh and measure your foods to stay within your calorie limit. Don't add a lot of fat or sugar. Remember also that it is the total calories in the food as you serve it that count.

There you are. Within these guidelines, your menus can contain the foods you enjoy most, meal schedules can be those that suit you best. Best of all, if you stick with it, you will reach your weight-goal, healthy and with a plan that you can go right on living with.

Dr. Mayer has compiled a start-off 31-Day Diet Plan with balanced menus and low-calorie recipes. For a copy, write Diet Plan, c-o The Victoria Times, 2621 Douglas, and enclose your name, address and $1.25 plus 25c for postage and handling.

FOOD FOR THOUGHT

NOTHING BEETS BORSCHT

By WILLIAM RICE

FOREST HILLS, N.Y. — Jane Blanksteen was cooking lunch. It's not surprising for a 19-year-old home from college to help out, especially when she has a stylish kitchen filled with mechanical conveniences to work in.

But this scene was unusual because the meal she was preparing came from her own cookbook.

A compact volume called Nothing Beets Borscht, Jane's Russian Cookbook, it is an exploration of cooking as well as of a Russian heritage that has charmed jaded cookery book readers and proved useful to beginning cooks.

The book took form during a semester-long project Jane undertook at Phillips Exeter Academy. "I knew nothing about Russian food when I started," she said. "We thought what my grandmother made was Jewish food; it turns out it was Russian."

Jane made her first visit to Russia in the summer of 1972 and a meeting, which pleased her, with her grandmother's sister and family members who still live in Moscow.

She did obtain recipes, but the food "was like school food — ugh! The produce is so poor. It tastes better here because we have better stuff to use.

"It is peasant food, but in a good sense. It's not expensive to make and everything lasts a long time."

"One reason why the recipes work" said her mother, Goldie Blanksteen, "is that Jane didn't know how to cook when she started. She wrote down what she did step-by-step and that's the way it is in the recipes."

UKRAINIAN BORSCHT
(10 to 12 Servings)

Stock:
3 pounds ham hock
1 bay leaf
1 onion, peeled and studded with 5 cloves
1 carrot, peeled
1 celery stalk
Salt and pepper
3 quarts water

Put all ingredients in a large soup pot and bring liquid to a boil.

Turn off heat and skim off scum on surface of soup. The scum is that foamy, muddy stuff reminiscent of the foam you are likely to find at a polluted beach. Now, cover pot — partially — and let soup simmer for 3 hours.

After 3 hours are up, let soup cool. When it is cool enough not to scald your fingers, remove vegetables and bay leaf and ham hock.

Throw out vegetables and bay leaf but save ham hock. Remove all meat from bones and shred it with your fingers; throw out bones. Put shredded meat in pot.

Refrigerate stock and, before you are about to use it, skim fat off the top. It will be a solid white layer covering the stock.

It Might Have Been, But Wasn't

A spring show this coming Friday and Saturday at first glance might have been designed for apartment balcony gardeners, with patio and sundeck tub gardeners also in mind.

That it was not so arranged will be at once apparent as we learn the show is the annual spring event of the well-known Vancouver Island Rock and Alpine Garden Society.

The show this week is to be staged in the Memorial Hall of Christ Church Cathedral, entrance at 951 Rockland Avenue.

Times for the show to be open are Friday, April 25 from 2 to 10 p.m.; Saturday, April 26 from 9:30 a.m. to 9:30 p.m.

If you have had the idea that alpine plants are insignificant, stunted things lacking in color, spend fifty cents for admission and a few hours of time to become acquainted with alpines as they are. You will find the plants have a dramatic beauty of perfection.

Although displayed in containers of various kinds, all plants shown are hardy to local summer and winter conditions. This does not mean they are adaptable to any type of garden location and soil conditions.

Many for instance will succumb if planted in heavy clay loam which retains standing water all winter.

The gardeners and nursery people who raise and grow these beauties have the patience born of interest in the special range of plants embraced in the terms "rock and alpine."

At first glance we are aware that low temperatures are not fatal to the plants, sun and open space is necessary, but water lying around the crowns in a mild winter could cause losses.

These few facts are an oversimplifying of the needs of rock and alpine plants but they are basics.

In these restricted areas of gardening, special soil and location conditions can be provided, and a new hobby begun.

Other classes of plants will be shown having general interest for all gardeners, terrestrial or high-rise. Included will be exquisite ferns of unbelievable delicacy yet hardy enough to grow in carefully chosen situations; other native and exotic woodland plants; primulas and more flowering soft leaved plants; succulents of the sempervivum and saxafrage groups; and also dwarf rhododendrons and other shrubby evergreens.

Miniature gardens and bonzai specimens will attract more attention than ever before, now that we have rooftop gardens in the city as well as balcony gardens.

If you are a longtime gardener and think you know them all, a visit to this siprng sho wwill bring to your attention at least one new plant — it may be the one chosen as the rarest plant in the show or it may be a newly collected British Columbia native from a remote mountain area or from a coastal forest.

Whatever plant you see at the show that is new to you will make the visit worth the time.

Media Centre To Miss Target

The new media centre being built by Greater Victoria school board won't be finished until at least Sept. 1, two months after it's needed.

Construction of the $55,458 building behind school district office on Foul Bay Rd. is expected to start in early May, the district construction and maintenance department says.

It won't be ready for the July 1 deadline when the district must vacate the present quarters of the media centre, Camosun College's Ewing Building.

District superintendent Jake Longmore has promised the board to talk with Camosun principal Dr. Grant Fisher to see if a two-month extension in the Ewing Building can be arranged.

The media centre houses $800,000 worth of audio-visual equipment and teaching aids used by district teachers.

New Manager For Empress

The Empress Hotel is expected to have a new manager in the near future.

Manager Bill Gray confirmed today that Canadian Pacific wants him to take over west coast sales, operating out of CP's Vancouver office.

"I was in sales in the past," he said. "They're not satisfied with what's happening now and they want me to do the job I did before."

Gray, who took over the Empress from Louis Finnemore March 23, 1973, said CP was satisfied with the job he'd done with the hotel and felt this was the time to make the change.

He wouldn't elaborate further but said CP's public relations office in Vancouver would make an official announcement later today.

Still not confirmed officially, the Times has learned that the Empress' executive assistant manager Don Wakelin could be the next manager of CP's Algonquin Hotel in St. Andrews-by-the-Sea, N.B.

Fishermen Seek Aid

VANCOUVER (CP) — The United Fishermen and Allied Workers Union said Tueaday it has applied for a mediation officer to assist in contract talks with the British Columbia Fisheries Association.

Contracts for the 3,500 shore workers and 600 tendermen expired April 15.

Union spokesman Jack Nichol said the companies have refused to make an offer. The union is seeking an increase for shore workers of $2 an hour over the current base rate of $4.76 an hour. It also wants the work week reduced to 37½ hours from 40 hours.

Your own Hawaiian oceanview condominium on Kauai, Maui or Hawaii as little as $33.75 per year!

Sounds unreal you say, a luxurious fully furnished (down to the silverware) Hawaiian condominium for as little as $33.75 per year.

Here's how it works.

We offer you a 40-year Vacation Time Share... interest giving you two weeks use (more if you wish) any time of the year on a reservation basis for a total purchase price from $1,350 (studio) to $4,200 (two-bedrooms). One-bedroom apartments also available. Financing available, 10% downpayment, five year terms, 10.5% annual interest rate. Inflation, we've beat it!

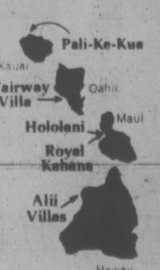
What else?

Your share of the operating expense is only $52 per year (slightly higher for larger units) which includes maid service, and that's it! It's yours for two weeks out of every year for the next forty years.

Exchange with other resorts!

You may exchange any part or all of your Vacation Time Share... interest with our other resort properties, or rent it any year you wish.



Plan to attend our slide and story presentation.

The Bridge Expert

By FRED KARPIN

When South gazed at the dummy after the opening lead had been made, he liked what he saw. But, unfortunately, he was needlessly optimistic in his play, and thereby lost a contract that he would have fulfilled had he been a bit pessimistic.

East-West vulnerable. South deals.

SOUTH
♠ A Q 5 4 2
♥ A 7 5
♦ Q 6
♣ A K 6

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 ♠	Pass	2 ♦	Pass
3 NT	Pass	Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Queen of ♥.

When West's heart opening was captured by dummy's king, dummy's sole entry outside of the diamond suit had been removed. Nevertheless, everything rated to be fine, since the five adversely-held diamonds figured to be divided 3-2. (About 68 per cent of the time.) And if they were so divided, declarer would bring home six diamond tricks.

Without thinking any further, at trick two South led a low diamond to his queen, after which he returned a diamond to the board's ace. When West discarded a club on the latter lead, South was a most unhappy fellow.

He next cashed the diamond king, and then led a spade, finessing his queen successfully. West returned a heart, which South took with his ace. When play had ended, declarer had made one spade trick, two hearts, three diamonds, and two clubs, which added up to eight, one trick short of his contract.

South's complete reliance on the diamond suit was unnecessary. He missed an additional chance that, on this day, would have saved his contract.

After winning the opening heart lead with the board's king, South should have played the ace of clubs, the king of clubs, and then his remaining club. If the outstanding clubs were divided 3-3, then dummy's remaining club would become promoted into a winner, and declarer's game-going trick.

On this given day, South would have made his contract even with the 4-2 division of the missing clubs, for his ace and king would have felled East's queen and ten. A third club lead would have been taken by West's jack, and the board's nine of clubs would be a winner.

But, somehow, declarer overlooked the possibility of developing a club trick.

YOUR HOROSCOPE

By SYDNEY OMARR

Forecast for Thursday, April 24

ARIES (March 21-April 19): What appears to be stiff opposition could be preverbial "blessing in disguise." Nevertheless, be cautious, especially where property values are concerned. Someone wants you to expand operations too quickly. Know it and pull in reins.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Study Aries message for valid hint. Be realistic. You get nothing for nothing. Know it and do something about revising plans. Eliminate element of self-deception. See individuals, situations as they actually exist. Accent is on what occurs behind closed doors.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Your ability to perceive opportunity is enhanced. You know what to do and when to do it. Key now is to have confidence. One in responsible position is willing to back you. Capricorn, Cancer persons could be involved.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Finish rather than initiate project. Blocks, deterrents are temporary. Keep the faith! News from a distance will flash green light. Aggressive persons are on your side. Refuse to be frightened by unorthodox procedures.

LEO (July 23 - Aug. 22): Study Cancer message. Stress originality, creative approach. Deal with another Leo — and an Aquarian. Travel may not be such a good idea. Reservations get canceled; there are also delays and postponements. Written message is cryptic. Relative could be playing games.

VIRGO (Aug. 23 - Sept. 22): Costs, profits and other areas of money are apt to be spotlighted. Your ability to teach and learn is emphasized. Aquarian is in picture. Accent is on separating fantasy from actuality — especially where money is concerned.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 - Oct. 22): Diversify. Spread influence. Expand emotional horizons. Be versatile without scattering your forces. Display charm, humor. Deal with Gemini, Sagittarius types. Accept social invitations. Welcome chance to be entertained by one who has genuine desire for friendship.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Tear down for purpose of rebuilding. Don't be shy about revisions, investigations, questions. What occurs behind the scenes could have direct effect on your welfare. One close to you may ask you to go "out of your way."

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Friends argue. You should strive to remain on sidelines without appearing indifferent. Not easy — but involved. Be ready for quick necessary. Gemini, Virgo and another Sagittarian could be changes, intensified relationship with member of opposite sex.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Home, domesticity, diplomacy, fulfillment of a key desire — these are spotlighted. One "in charge" is confused. Know it and hold off on special favors, requests. Give more attention to partner, mate. Give yourself time to regain posture of confidence.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20 - Feb. 18): Messages tend to go astray — or to be misinterpreted. Key is to trim fat, to see what is needed and what must be discarded. Pisces, Virgo individuals are in picture. Clandestine meeting is highlighted. You learn significant lesson.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Money and how it gets that way is dominant theme. Pressures exist as you are given added responsibilities. Concern with what is hidden, obscured is evident. If single, you discuss marriage and whether you can afford it.

IF TODAY IS YOUR BIRTHDAY, you have the ability to teach, to dramatize and to captivate with your voice. The year features significant changes. If single, you marry. Married or single, your lifestyle becomes more exciting, more of a challenge. March and December should be your outstanding months. Gemini, Virgo persons play key roles in your life.

FUN WITH FIGURES

By J. A. H. HUNTER

We have 4478 for the game today. Two 4s, one 7 and one 8. Using all four each time, but no other digits at all, you form expressions for the consecutive numbers from one up.

Any arithmetical signs may be used, but no summation or factorial symbols. Don't forget decimals, regular and repeater, also roots and powers (no extra digits). For example, 48 plus 7 minus 4 is a solution for 51.

The limit without a break in continuity seems to be 108. I shall be glad to check solutions, and will send hints to help in future games if requested.

MORE CARR ART GONE

Four more Emily Carr paintings valued in excess of $5,000 have disappeared from the Newcombe collection in the provincial archives, Victoria police reported today.

The discovery was made after an inventory of the collection was conducted earlier this week.

The inventory had been sparked after a watercolor of a gravehouse by the noted B.C. artist surfaced last week.

The missing paintings are described as:

● Number 108, Rivers Inlet, measuring about eight by ten inches and valued at $2,000.

● Number 106, a watercolor of the Songhees Reserve, measuring eight by ten inches.

● Number 106A, a scene of an Indian village on the reverse side of the previous painting. Together the two paintings are valued at $3,000.

● Number 132, an Indian design probably done in indian ink, size not known, and worth between $100 and $200.

Forest Firms, B.C. In Joint Project?

The B.C. government has approached MacMillan Bloedel Ltd. and other companies to join in a $118 million forestry development, according to Socred MLA Jim Chabot Columbia River).

Chabot said Ray Jones, chairman of the government-owned B.C. Cellulose, approached MB to form a consortium wieh the government to build a new sawmill and pulp or newsprint mill at Ocean Falls.

The Socred would not reveal his sources but said they are reliable.

He said he did not know MB's response to the offer but now the government is approaching other private enterprises to join the consortium.

The government is also planning a new housing project at Roscoe Bay, 15 miles north of Ocean Falls, said Chabot.

Resources Minister Bob Williams, responding to Chabot's statements during debate of Williams' spending estimates, said the government has always said it is willing to contemplate a mixture of partners in developing Ocean Falls.

There is a possibility of a number of corporations becoming involved in future development, including European interests, he said.

But Williams did not specifically answer Chabot's statement about the $118 million price tag on a consortium development.

Chabot said he had proof the department of housing is planning a housing development at Roscoe Bay despite the fact Housing Minister Lorne Nicolson denied last week he had any knowledge of such a scheme.

Williams said no discussions have been held with Nicolson but the project is being considered "at the corporate level only."

Williams said the government is leaving all the options for the area open, adding the area does have urban and industrial potential.

"There's terrific potential for industrial expansion on the central coast and we are having active discussions to see that the potential is realized."

ROYAL VISIT

OTTAWA (CP) — The Queen will open the 1976 Olympic Games in Montreal, Government House announced today.

She will be accompanied by Prince Philip, who will attend equestrian events in his capacity as president of the Federation Equestre Internationale.

Further details are to be announced later.

No City CRTC Visit

Victoria city council has not sent anyone to make its intervention in person at the Canadian Radio-Television Commission hearings on applications for Channel 10, Mayor Peter Pollen said Tuesday.

The city's written brief asking that the CRTC give the channel to the applicant providing the best Victoria coverage will stand on its own, he said.

The mayor said he telexed the CRTC to say the reason council was sending no one over was because it was only allowed 10 minutes to speak and was not allowed to question the applicants for the channel.

Other groups making interventions, such as the Victoria citizens' group Publicair, have also been limited in the time they are allowed to speak.

Interventions for and against the applicants for Channel 10 will be dealt with today by the CRTC, which sat into the night Tuesday hearing applications for the last remaining VHF channel in the Vancouver-Victoria area.

Although hundreds of organizations and individuals have filed interventions, 17 will present their arguments in person before the commission.

Three private groups have applied for channel 10: Pacific Rim Broadcasting Ltd., Ten Television Ltd., and Western Approaches Ltd.

Western Approaches has said it wants a UHF licence on Channel 26 if the VHF licence for Channel 10 is unavailable.

It also faces opposition from a group making a bid for the UHF licence only.

Channel Twentysix Ltd., is associated with Channel Seventynine Ltd., which operates the City-TV UHF channel in Toronto, and is known for its late-night movies that contain nudity.

The hearing was told Channel Twenty-six will borrow for three years the CITY-TV management team, to help establish the UHF outlet in Vancouver.

The Western Approaches application was made by Bill Bellman, president of Q Broadcasting Ltd., which operates CHQM-AM and FM radio in Vancouver and CKPG and CKPG TV in Prince George.

First of the intervenors will be the provincial government which has already made public its statement. The government opposes all three commercial contenders for channel 10 and asks the CRTC to adopt a policy ordering all television licencees in British Columbia to provide time for government educational programming.

The CBC also will oppose the Channel 10 applicants because it wants the channel for a Victoria-based operation of its own.

SURPRISE LOSER in what looks like a no-contest tug-of-war will be Brandy, a 2½-year-old St. Bernard whose owners have decided he has to go. Lynne Ellis of Toronto, owner of the dog since it was 10 weeks old, gave birth to son Jamie 10 months ago and finds the twosome too much to handle. Brandy is awaiting a new owner in the Society for Animals in Distress office.

Skipper Finally Retires

"I quit."

Yes, naturalist Freeman (Skipper) King has been saying for years he was going to give up his job as a Goldstream provincial park naturalist, but when he said it today, he meant it.

Skipper who is 84, with 14 years service with the parks branch, said he should have done so years ago.

"It was too much for me ... I knew it, but kept on going," he said.

He explained as many as 200 children a day are taken on nature tours of the park.

"There is no let up, and for me it was getting a bit wearisome," he said.

But if Skipper's many friends think he has quit being a naturalist, they are all wrong. The preservation of nature — the trees, flowers, birds, animals and insects — is too important for him.

He has quit his job in one park to go to work in another — Thomas Francis Park in the Highlands.

But there is a difference. In the latter he will be working without pay as a volunteer, and free to come and go as he chooses.

"I'll be at Thomas Francis Park if the kids want to see me," he said. "I'll be glad to show them around."

David Stirling in charge of the nature interpretation program for the parks branch, said the branch was sorry to see Skipper go.

He said the nature interpretation programs for school children would continue at Godlstream under naturalist Jennifer Beckett and Jennifer Saari.

Viet Cong Reject Plea For Truce From Saigon

Times News Services

South Vietnam appealed today for a cease-fire and negotiations guaranteed to give the Viet Cong a share of power in the South Vietnamese government.

The appeal was promptly rejected by Viet Cong spokesmen in both Saigon and Paris.

The two-day-old government of Tran Van Huong which is trying to head off a full-scale communist assault against Saigon, made the offer in diplomatic language free of the rhetoric of past communiques and made no attempt to blame the Communists for the deteriorating military situation in South Vietnam.

"We consider this demand as unacceptable since it does not meet the conditions necessary for a true settlement of the Vietnameses problem," a Paris spokesman said.

"The proposal fools no one and will hardly help the Americans out of their defeat," said the Viet Cong delegation in Saigon.

Huong was "only a puppet and part of a game manipulated by the Americans to keep the Thieu clique without Thieu, continue a policy of neocolonialism, sabotage the Paris agreement and interfere with the right to self-determination of the South Vietnamese people," a spokesman added.

An explosive device, meanwhile, blew up in a crowded market in downtown Saigon today, killing or wounding more than six persons and spreading panic.

The North Vietnamese army is so close to the city that South Vietnamese commanders moved the govern-

Air Canada Paris Staff On Strike

PARIS (AP) — Personnel at Air Canada went on strike in Paris today, immobilizing a jetliner that was due to leave for Montreal, a spokesman for the employees said.

About 100 out of the company's 104-person Paris staff went on strike to protest the company's plans to fire 47 employees in an economy move, the strike spokesman said.

"All ground personnel, employees and technical staff are not working," he said. "We are not occupying the plane but it cannot leave." The spokesman said the strike was "indefinite."

The spokesman said the company had told employees the dismissals were meant to save $50,000 in the first year and $300,000 in the following three years. "But we are not

Alcohol Tops Crash Causes

A compelling need for vigorous enforcement of laws relating to impaired driving was stressed in a report to the legislature Tuesday by Highways Minister Graham Lea.

Alcohol was involved in 228 of the 518 accidents which caused 625 deaths in 1974, the report showed. Of those 228 accidents, 14 per cent involved one or more impaired drivers. The year before 635 were killed in 522 accidents.

As in previous years the report states, responsibility for the majority of fatal accidents must be placed on the shoulders of careless drivers and pedestrians.

Human error connected with drug and alcohol intake, excessive speed, lack of seat belts, and illness or fatigue, all took their toll of B.C.'s motorists.

A failure of motorists to use seat belts drew special mention. Seat belts were not used in 74 per cent of the fatalities, an increase from the previous year's rate of 67 per cent.

"This tends to show a public disregard of the government's Is Your Safety Belt Fastened highway sign program under way for four years."

Roadside hazards continue to constitute a major hazard, with steep banks, and ditches, utility poles, trees and manmade constructions, the final cause of death in many instances.

The majority of fatal accidents occurred at dusk, between 5 and 6 p.m., accounting for almost eight per cent of the total.

Progress Claimed In CUPE Talks

Significant progress was made for the first time Tuesday in mediation of Greater Victoria civic workers' dispute, but the possibilty of a settlement within a day or two remains over-optimistic according to a management source.

Two days of talks at Royal Oak Inn adjourned until Thursday morning after provincial mediator Clark Gilmour excused himself to meet another commitment today.

Adjournament came some four hours after elected representatives detached themselves from municipal administrators conducting the bargaining through Gilmour, who meets with Employers and Canadian Union of Public Employees in separate conference rooms.

"Some very significant progress is being made toward a settlement," the source said. Both sides in the dispute, now 13½ weeks old, recognize that "things are in very good balance," he said.

It was understood the base labor rate for outside workers had been negotiated to within about 10 cents an hour of a rate agreeable to both sides.

However, a report attributed to a union spokesman suggesting a settlement of more than $6 an hour is possible was described as "ridiculous" by the management source.

Union spokesman Tom Smith agreed that some progress was made Tuesday. "I don't want to get people's hopes up. I don't want to be pessimistic or optimistic at this time," Smith said.

"But after three months, hopefully there could be something to take to the membership soon."

Two more days of mediation are scheduled for this week, with the locale changing to School District 61 administration centre and the Camosun College Ewing building. Gilmour will continue to meet the sides independently, going from one building to the other.

JACKLIN SAFETY ACTION PROMISED

Highways Minister Graham Lea promised action today to improve pedestrian safety along Jacklin Road in the vicinity of Belmont-Fisher secondary school.

Lea and Municipal Affairs Minister Jim Lorimer met Jim Campbell, chairman of the Capital Regional Board, and Campbell said later the highways minister said steps would be taken to reduce hazards to those walking along Jacklin.

The road has become a major traffic artery linking the Trans-Canada Highway with the Sooke district and is also the route walked by many children to and from school. Near accidents involving traffic and the heavy flow of pedestrians have produced complaints and petitions.

Campbell said what action to be taken was not detailed but it may be in the form of better separation between road and foot traffic, possibly involving curbing, a verge or preparation of a path for walkers.

The regional board chairman also said that Lorimer has undertaken to speed the process of establishing a committee to study and make recommendations on some form of municipal government for the Colwood-Langford area.

NEWS BRIEFS

Dollar Skidding

BRUSSELS (UPI) — A sudden wave of selling sent the U.S. dollar into a slide today on all major European money markets. Gold rose. "Everybody is selling dollars," said one Belgian banker, offering no explanation.

CoL Slows in U.S.

WASHINGTON (WP) — The increase in the cost of living slowed further in the U.S. during March, the labor department reported Tuesday, providing strong evidence that the inflationary spiral of 1973 and 1974 is over.

Jet Emergency

OTTAWA (CP) — An Air Canada DC-9 jet was forced to make an emergency landing at Ottawa International Airport Tuesday after mechanical problems developed in one of its two engines. Cause of the problem still is not known.

Legislation Set

OTTAWA (UPI) — The federal government will introduce legislation ordering 2,300 Quebec dockworkers back to their jobs if representatives of the Dockworkers and the Maritime Employers's Association do not work out a settlement on their own today.

POSTIES BACK ON JOB

OTTAWA (CP) — Letter carriers across Canada returned to work today as a "sign of good faith in bargaining" according to Roger Decarie, president of the Letter Carriers' Union.

Decarie said the selective strike action of the union, which began Monday, would be called off "for one day only" while post office and union negotiators held a "very important meeting."

Mail in Victoria was slowed to a trickle Tuesday and early today as a result of the Vancouver walkout.

Canada Drops Claim for Birds' Spill Deaths

By FRANK RUTTER
Times Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON — Canada has given up a claim that the United States owes it compensation for 30 birds, valued at $2 each, three years after a oil spill in which the birds died.

The $60 question, which remains unanswered, was regarded as extremely important because of the precedent involved in settling liability for damages caused by oil spills.

Getting an answer is of growing concern as the time nears when increased numbers of large tankers will be carrying cargoes of oil from the Trans-Alaska pipeline down the West Coast and into the narrow waters separating British Columbia from Washington State, a situation that Canadians fear will inevitably produce a spill of great magnitude.

It was on June 4, 1972, that a connecting joint ruptured on a flow line from the Liberian tanker World Bond to the Atlantic Richfield Company terminal at Cherry Point.

Seventy barrels — or 2,940 gallons—of Iranian crude oil spilled from the ruptured line into the waters of northern Puget Sound.

The spill was cleaned up within six days and Arco, sensitive to public opinion, quickly agreed in principle to pay the costs.

It was not as simple as that, however. It took until now to wind up the case, and even now the key questions of liability remain unresolved.

One basic disagreement has been whether the U.S. government or a private U.S. company should be liable for the results of an oil spill.

Ottawa has maintained that the government is liable. Washington has refused to accept any liability.

Canada won a small point by conducting all negotiations with Arco through the State department, believing that this implies some government liability.

State department, however, insists that it was merely a conduit.

All Canadian attempts failed to get the U.S. government to actually pay for damages, even for the birds.

Last November, Arco wrote Ottawa a cheque for $11,000 to pay for labor involved in cleaning up the spill on the B.C. side.

As the spill was small, Ottawa did not pursue a claim for physical damage to the shoreline. But it did persist in its claim for $60 for the dead sea birds.

Neither the U.S. nor Arco would pay the $60 and this week Ottawa gave up what could have been a precedent-setting cause.

In its note to the State department, Ottawa said it continues to hold the view that someone is liable for damage to wildlife, and reserves the right to pursue future claims.

Aside from refusing direct liability, the U.S. also argued that it was impossible to set a value on birds or to be sure that the birds were Canadian residents.

Crusaders Find Charm, Profit In Ancient James Bay Homes

While many of us sit sipping a cool beer and watching television, Bill and Gail McKechnie and some of their young friends relax in the evenings by ripping up floors and smashing in false ceilings.

They hope it may bring them in a little extra cash. But mostly they do it because they hate to see old James Bay die.

The first residential area in Greater Victoria and once the city's fashionable district before the move to Rockland, James Bay is fast becoming a concrete jungle — a maze of streets lined with apartment buildings.

That's where the McKechnies and their friends come in. They are hoping to stop this trend by renovating and restoring some of the finer old houses and thus make them "too good" to demolish.

We strolled together, Bill and I, up Avalon Road from the grand old house he and his wife have just sold, to look at other homes they think are worthy of saving.

"When we moved here two-and-a-half years ago, there were about six or seven of these old houses in James Bay coming down each week," says Bill. "I joined the James Bay Community Association, which was instrumental in getting a large part of James Bay rezoned away from apartments."

ORNAMENTAL FRONT tumbles amid heaps of bricks and workman releases crane hook as house is demolished. It's scenes like this one in James Bay that McKechnie and friends hope to end. (Max Low photos)

Their house — "as far as I can determine it was built in 1885," says Bill — was run down when they bought it. There was a sagging old garage which they tore down, the foundations were gone, the porch was delapidated and most of the front steps were missing.

"The owner hadn't done a thing to it and was holding out for an apartment site on this road, so we had to pay a higher price than usual," explains Bill.

Inside, the house is beautiful now. False ceilings (five feet lower than the original ones) were ripped out in each room, revealing classic mouldings and stained glass windows that go right to the top. Layer after layer of linoleum has been stripped from the floors leaving the original wood. And everywhere Bill and his wife have used period-type wallpaper to lend an authentic touch.

"I did most of the work myself," says Bill. "I got under the house with three hydraulic jacks to fix up the foundations and I repaired the porch and steps. And we did the work inside."

Now McKechnie, a lawyer when he's not knocking down ceilings, is working on another project. He has bought a beautiful old house not far away, which he is turning into an office building.

"Before we did this type of thing, the only people fixing up houses in James Bay were those who put in wallboard partitions and as many kitchens as they could and rented them out," Bill says. "We have tried instead to restore them to the grand old houses they once were."

Around the corner in Huntington Place, improvements made by John Keay and his wife Anne to an old house there are even more obvious.

Keay and his friend Rich Collier, both graduates of the school of architecture at the University of British Columbia, just over a year ago paid $20,000 for the land and $1 for the house, which had been condemned by the city.

Their idea was to "do the house up and sell it." But they did it up so beautifully that now John and Anne can't bear to part with it. And so they've decided to sell their place on Oswego Street (another old house across from Macdonald Park that they've renovated) and move to Huntington Place.

"This place was built in about 1890 and when we got it, it was a real mess," says John.

The transition has been remarkable. Now the attractive house is worth twice, possibly two-and-a-half times what they paid for it. Last year, it won the Hallmark Society Award for the best restoration job on a residential dwelling in Greater Victoria.

"These old houses are charming and have great character and a luxury of space with things like high ceilings, big rooms and fireplaces," John points out. "It's my feeling that if you can go through a house and put it back on the market, then that's a good case for keeping these old homes."

And that's just what McKechnie and Keay and their other friends are trying to do. Whenever they hear of an old place, in an area zoned for apartments, that's likely to be demolished they get together and try to buy it. But the crusading doesn't alway work.

We walked back to Avalon Road just in time to see a demolition crane lower a gorgeous ornamental front of an old house to the ground in a cloud of dust.

"That's one we lost," Bill says sadly. "We tried to buy it, tried to save it, but the owner wouldn't listen.

"Oh well, you can't win them all, I guess."

By SUSAN RUTTAN
Times Staff

Greater Victoria schools are in high gear helping students catch up from the education loss caused by the six-week custodians' strike.

Principals were asked, as soon as schools resumed normal hours two weeks ago, to report to district superintendent Jake Longmore on academic problems caused by the strike, and what is being done about them.

The reports show most schools have already organized special help for students needing it, assistant superintendent Dr. John Wiens said Tuesday, and to foist some great district-wide remedial program on them now would only confuse matters.

"By the look of things they're in great shape," he said.

The custodians and maintenance workers, Local 382 of the Canadian Union of Public Employees, struck Feb. 24, reducing school classes to three hours in the morning for the duration.

Community relations officer Bill Stavdal, who has been studying the principals' reports, said most elementary school principals think any catch-up needed can be done in the normal way.

Youngsters who have fallen behind will be spotted by their teacher and given special help.

"The high school principals are saying help is available for students who want it," Stavdal said.

"The onus is on the students and parents to make sure they get through the year."

Most principals say that students who did their assignments during the six-week strike will make their year, he said.

"The immature and undisciplined students have suffered during the strike," said Esquimalt senior secondary principal Court Brousson in his report.

"Don't wait for June."

Some examples of what schools are doing:

— Highrock junior secondary is opening its industrial education, home economics, and typing rooms daily before and after school hours and at noon, for students who want to do extra work.

Tutorials in non-lab courses are being given at the same times, and cassette tapes are being made available to help French students bone up.

— Central junior secondary has cut back the number of courses offered in its fourth quarter timetable so students who failed third quarter courses can repeat.

— Cedar Hill junior secondary is opening labs, shops, sewing and cooking rooms, and typing rooms early in the morning and at noon.

At Cedar Hill and a few other schools students who are behind are being told to attend after-school study sessions, as long as their parents approve.

— Teachers at Shoreline, Esquimalt, S. J. Willis and other schools are available outside of regular school hours to give extra help.

Two elementary schools, Hillcrest and Margaret Jenkins, have felt it necessary to start a special program to help students who have slipped behind.

Hillcrest principal Donald Henderson said about 20 of the 400 pupils have fallen seriously behind.

South Park principal David Allan reported that 20 per cent of his pupils didn't attend at all for the duration of the strike, but teachers are managing to help them catch up.

One school, Burnside, has cut back on cultural programs and school sports training to give more time for academic subjects.

Yet another, McKenzie, is emphasizing physical education, art, music and science because these areas were neglected during the six weeks of shortened school hours.

George Jay and other schools are using student teachers to do remedial teaching with students.

Sooke Tax Jump

Sooke School District homeowners face a heavy tax increase this year as a result of a 38.93 education mill rate set Tuesday by the school board.

The rate is up more than 12 points over the 1974 rate of 26.10 mills—about 46 per cent.

District secretary-treasurer Marilyn Rudge said today the district has had a falling mill rate for several years but this year things have turned around.

She said the district ran a budget deficit last year and that deficit had to be covered in the 1975 budget.

Sooke district's gross budget for 1975 is $9.8 million, up from $7.5 million last year.

Education Minister Eileen Dailly has predicted the average education mill rate across the province will be 41.21 mills this year.

Greater Victoria school board will set its mill rate tonight; Saanich board will set its on Monday.

Summer Jobs Found for 38 Young People

Thirty eight young people have been hired to newly-created jobs in the Victoria area and another 62 are expected to be hired before month's end.

The program is being financed by the provincial department of labor and co-ordinated by Victoria Chamber of Commerce.

Project supervisor Leslie Fiddler of the department of labor said funds are available to hire about 100 young people and it appears that more than 100 suitable jobs will be available by the deadline date of April 25.

All positions are newly-created and not all jobs offered by businessmen are judged to be suitable. For example, she said, a total of 47 companies offered 70 new jobs in the first half of the placement program but only 38 young people were placed.

"We are being highly selective. The job has to be meaningful."

She said one of the side benefits of the program has been the creation of 12 new jobs on Salt Spring Island.

"Parents are worried because their children have to leave Salt Spring to find work in the summer and that can cause social problems.

"Now they are getting jobs on Salt Spring and can stay closer to home."

Of the first 38 jobs approved, 12 were on Salt Spring Island.

They are mainly construction jobs and summer employment related to the tourist industry.

The other 26 jobs newly created are in the Victoria area and range from assisting a hair stylist to marble cutting.

The young people are paid the minimum wage which works out to a minimum of $400 a month. They are guaranteed work for at least two months and not more than four months.

Standard work week is of 35 hours but this could go as high as 40 hours.

A major aim of the provincial government program is to find work for young people who might otherwise have difficulty finding jobs on their own. Unemployment is highest in the teenage group which was also an important factor in the creation of the program.

The provincial government pays 50 per cent of the salary up to a maximum cost to the department of $300.

Government Scraps Blanshard Tunnel

A switch in plans for the Blanshard Street extension will save the provincial government at least $1 million, Saanich Mayor Ed Lum said today.

Lum was commenting on a statement by Highways Minister Graham Lea Tuesday that plans for the controversial tunnel, originally planned as part of the extension at the Town and Country Shopping Centre, have been scrapped.

Instead, Lea said municipal officials and the highways department have agreed on one of two alternative routes proposed by Saanich.

Lum said Lea had not yet informed him which alternative route had been selected.

"Either alternative will mean the savings of at least $1 million," Lum said. "I told the minister when I became mayor I was against the tunnel and he agreed to consider other routes to go."

Saanich council found the tunnel concept unacceptable because of poor access for southbound vehicles and the blocking off of access to an area due to be developed.

Ask The Times

Q. My husband has an expression — son of a gun — which he uses all the time. He tells me it's a navy expression but I've never heard it used by any of the navy men we know. Is he right? — P.D.

A. He could be. There is a book on legends of the Royal Navy, based on days when women were allowed to go to sea, which states that if a wife was having a hard labor the ship's gunners would fire a volley to help the birth along. Hence, a boy born to the sound of gunfire would be a son of a gun. The term "pusser's planket," if you're interested, is attributed to the fact that babies born aboard were presented with a blanket by the ship's purser.

No Disobedience—Mother

A Victoria mother has denied that her son disobeyed her by attending a sex education class.

Mrs. Rosetta Newberry of 249 Wildwood Ave. said her son, a Grade 10 student at Central junior secondary school, didn't realize his regular math class had been switched to a special family life education class.

Mrs. Newberry said she had no prior notification of the class.

She had appeared before Greater Victoria school board Monday evening to protest her son's being subjected to the class.

Ted Callbeck, assistant director special education programs for the school district, told the board at the meeting that Mrs. Newberry didn't want her son to attend the classes and he disobeyed her and attended.

Callbeck said today the two math classes the boy takes were cancelled April 15 to allow the district's itinerant family life teachers to present their program for Grade 9 and 10 students.

The switch in classes was clearly announced by Central vice-principal Terry Tobacco, Callbeck said, and it was up to students whose parents object to family life education not to attend.

The boy is unknown to the itinerant teachers, so they had no way of knowing he was in the class, he said.

Callbeck said parents had been notified last fall of an Oct. 10 meeting for parents at which the itinerant teachers and several physicians who help with the program explained exactly what would be taught.

A number of factors, including this year's custodians' strike, made it necessary to postpone the Grade 9 and 10 family life program until last week, he said.

Richard had been excused from the Grade 9 program last year, he said.

Civic Dispute Delays Burials

After nearly 14 weeks of civic workers' dispute there are five deferred burials awaiting a return to work of Ross Bay Cemetery outside staff.

Undertakers say the figure is not unusual since there are normally few interments at the historic burial park where all available space and grave plots are allocated.

But the fact that burials have been held up, even though funeral services were held in some cases is distressing to relatives of the deceased undertakers say.

"I imagine most relatives would have been most upset, but that's my own personal feeling," observed Rev. Angus Cameron, one of the clergymen who took part in a deferred burial funeral service.

Relatives of the deceased said to him: "What a pity the service could not be completed." Some had come from California, Oregon and other parts of Canada for the funeral, Cameron said.

But another of the clergymen involved said he had no personal knowledge of concern.

"No one I know of has expressed any upset or distress because a body cannot be buried in Ross Bay Cemetery because of the strike," said Father John Lancaster

Some bodies have been in cold storage for weeks pending the labor settlement that will allow gravediggers to do their work.

Undertakers say there should be no public concern about the situation. With additional embalming and cold room storage it is sanitary to keep a corpse for up to six months.

The real problem is the risk of running out of storage space, which became critical during a similar dispute in Vancouver recently, one funeral director said.

However, it was pointed out, in some parts of Canada the holding of bodies for months at a time is normal because deep frost makes digging impossible.

Legal Battle Over Bequeathed House

An elderly Victoria woman knew what she was doing when she gave her house to two friends, B.C. Supreme Court was told Tuesday.

John McIllree, a lawyer who represented Effie T. Gellett who died in 1973, told Mr. Justice D. R. Verchere she "fully" comprehended the nature of what she was doing in March, 1971.

McIllree, one of the executors of her will, said she phoned him March 17, 1971, and asked for an appointment because she wanted to give her home at 1347 Craigdarroch to William and Pearl George.

"I advised her I did not think it was a good idea," he said, because it would incur gift tax immediately, she would bar herself from use of the house, she might have a future falling out with the Georges and could "incur the wrath" of her family who were the beneficiaries of her will.

"She said the Georges had been very kind to her and she wanted to make them a gift of the house," he said.

Two days later, in his office, papers were signed involving a deed of land from Mrs. Gellett to the Georges allowing her a life interest in the house, a promissory note from the Georges to her for $25,000 and a codicil (supplement) to her will forgibing money owing her from the Georges.

By ROGER STONEBANKS
Times Staff

Also present at the meeting were his secretary, Ruth Peterson, the Georges and Mrs. Gellett.

"I might say the Georges seemed surprised at the events and said 'thank you' and 'we'll make sure the house is looked after'," McIllree testified.

Cross-examined by G. D. Dallas of Vancouver, McIllree agreed he had George go to Mrs. Gellett to assist in looking after the affairs of her husband who became ill in the late 1960s. George was her book-keeper after husband died.

The house value of $25,000 seemed to her to be a good figure. It had been valued at $28,000 in 1970 but the market had declined.

He agreed that the land registry office wouldn't accept $25,000 as the value and it was then increased to $28,000.

Richard Law, representing McIllree and George in court, said there is no contest over Mrs. Gellett's will, only the codicil involving the house. The gross value of her estate was $114,164.39.

Dallas is representing Walter W. Moore, Mrs. Gellett's brother, who is one of the beneficiaries of her will.

Law said "it is suggested by Mr. Moore that it (the codicil) was executed by undue influence or coercion."

Dr. William Kendrick, a specialist in urology, said he saw Mrs. Gellett March 17, 1971, because she complained of bleeding of the bladder, a typical sign of cancer.

"She was bright and alert. She seemed a very alert woman indeed. I was startled to see her stated age (83) and her appearance before me," he said.

He described her as "lucid, neat, clean." She understood then that she may have cancer of the bladder.

She was hospitalized March 29, 1971, after cancer of the bladder was diagnosed and released shortly after May 31. She died June 3, 1973.

The case continued today.

91st YEAR, No. 264 — VICTORIA, B.C., WEDNESDAY, APRIL 23, 1975 — 15 CENTS DAILY, 30 CENTS SATURDAY

MORE CARR ART GONE

Four more Emily Carr paintings valued in excess of $5,000 have disappeared from the Newcombe collection in the provincial archives, Victoria police reported today.

The discovery was made after an inventory of the collection was conducted earlier this week.

The inventory had been sparked after a watercolor of a gravehouse by the noted B.C. artist surfaced last week.

The missing paintings are described as:

● Number 108, Rivers Inlet, measuring about eight by ten inches and valued at $2,000.

● Number 106, a watercolor of the Songhees Reserve, measuring eight by ten inches.

● Number 106A, a scene of an Indian village on the reverse side of the previous painting. Together the two paintings are valued at $3,000.

● Number 132, an Indian design probably done in indian ink, size not known, and worth between $100 and $200.

Forest Firms, B.C. In Joint Project?

The B.C. government has approached MacMillan Bloedel Ltd. and other companies to join in a $118 million forestry development, according to Socred MLA Jim Chabot Columbia River).

Chabot said Ray Jones, chairman of the government-owned B.C. Cellulose, approached MB to form a consortium wieh the government to build a new sawmill and pulp or newsprint mill at Ocean Falls.

The Socred would not reveal his sources but said they are reliable.

He said he did not know MB's response to the offer but now the government is approaching other private enterprises to join the consortium.

The government is also planning a new housing project at Roscoe Bay, 15 miles north of Ocean Falls, said Chabot.

Resources Minister Bob Williams, responding to Chabot's statements during debate of Williams' spending estimates, said the government has always said it is willing to contemplate a mixture of partners in developing Ocean Falls.

There is a possibility of a number of corporations becoming involved in future development, including European interests, he said.

But Williams did not specifically answer Chabot's statement about the $118 million price tag on a consortium development.

Chabot said he had proof the department of housing is planning a housing development at Roscoe Bay despite the fact Housing Minister Lorne Nicolson denied last week he had any knowledge of such a scheme.

Williams said no discussions have been held with Nicolson but the project is being considered "at the corporate level only."

Outside consultants are working with Ocean Falls Corp. and B.C. Cellulose in studying the possibility of housing at the site, he added.

Williams said the government is leaving all the options for the area open, adding the area does have urban and industrial potential.

"There's terrific potential for industrial expansion on the central coast and we are having active discussions to see that the potential is realized."

ROYAL VISIT

OTTAWA (CP) — The Queen will open the 1976 Olympic Games in Montreal, Government House announced today.

She will be accompanied by Prince Philip, who will attend equestrian events in his capacity as president of the Federation Equestre Internationale.

Further details are to be announced later.

No City CRTC Visit

Victoria city council has not sent anyone to make its intervention in person at the Canadian Radio-Television Commission hearings on applications for Channel 10, Mayor Peter Pollen said Tuesday.

The city's written brief asking that the CRTC give the channel to the applicant providing the best Victoria coverage will stand on its own, he said.

The mayor said he telexed the CRTC to say the reason council was sending no one over was because it was only allowed 10 minutes to speak and was not allowed to question the applicants for the channel.

Other groups making interventions, such as the Victoria citizens' group Publicair, have also been limited in the time they are allowed to speak.

Interventions for and against the applicants for Channel 10 will be dealt with today by the CRTC, which sat into the night Tuesday hearing applications for the last remaining VHF channel in the Vancouver-Victoria area.

Although hundreds of organizations and individuals have filed interventions, 17 will present their arguments in person before the commission.

Three private groups have applied for channel 10: Pacific Rim Broadcasting Ltd., Ten Television Ltd., and Western Approaches Ltd.

Western Approaches has said it wants a UHF licence on Channel 26 if the VHF licence for Channel 10 is unavailable.

It also faces opposition from a group making a bid for the UHF licence only.

Channel Twenty-six Ltd. is associated with Channel Seventynine Ltd., which operates the City-TV UHF channel in Toronto, and is known for its late-night movies that contain nudity.

The hearing was told Channel Twenty-six will borrow for three years the CITY-TV management team, to help establish the UHF outlet in Vancouver.

The Western Approaches application was made by Bill Bellman, president of Q Broadcasting Ltd., which operates CHQM-AM and FM radio in Vancouver and CKPG and CKPG TV in Prince george.

First of the intervenors will be the provincial government which has already made public its statement. The government opposes all three commercial contenders for channel 10 and asks the CRTC to adopt a policy ordering all television licencees in British Columbia to provide time for government educational programming.

The CBC also will oppose the Channel 10 applicants because it wants the channel for a Victoria-based operation of its own.

SURPRISE LOSER in what looks like a no-contest tug-of-war will be Brandy, a 2½-year-old St. Bernard whose owners have decided he has to go. Lynne Ellis of Toronto, owner of the dog since it was 10 weeks old, gave birth to son Jamie 10 months ago and finds the twosome too much to handle. Brandy is awaiting a new owner in the Society for Animals in Distress office.

Skipper Finally Retires

"I quit."

Yes, naturalist Freeman (Skipper) King has been saying for years he was going to give up his job as a Goldstream provincial park naturalist, but when he said it today, he meant it.

Skipper who is 84, with 14 years service with the parks branch, said he should have done so years ago.

"It was too much for me . . . I knew it, but kept on going," he said.

He explained as many as 200 children a day are taken on nature tours of the park.

"There is no let up, and for me it was getting a bit wearisome," he said.

But if Skipper's many friends think he has quit being a naturalist, they are all wrong. The preservation of nature — the trees, flowers, birds, animals and insects — is too important for him.

He has quit his job in one park to go to work in another —Thomas Francis Park in the Highlands.

But there is a difference. In the latter he will be working without pay as a volunteer, and free to come and go as he chooses.

"I'll be at Thomas Francis Park if the kids want to see me," he said. "I'll be glad to show them around."

David Stirling in charge of the nature interpretation program for the parks branch, said the branch was sorry to see Skipper go.

He said the nature interpretation program for school children would continue at Goldstream under naturalist Jennifer Beckett and Jennifer Saari.

Viet Cong Reject Plea For Truce From Saigon

Times News Services

South Vietnam appealed today for a cease-fire and negotiations guaranteed to give the Viet Cong a share of power in the South Vietnamese government.

The appeal was promptly rejected by Viet Cong spokesmen in both Saigon and Paris.

The two-day-old government of Tran Van Huong which is trying to head off a full-scale communist assault against Saigon, made the offer in diplomatic language free of the rhetoric of past communiques and made no attempt to blame the Communists for the deteriorating military situation in South Vietnam.

"We consider this demand as unacceptable since it does not meet the conditions necessary for a true settlement of the Vietnameses problem," a Paris spokesman said.

"The proposal fools no one and will hardly help the Americans out of their defeat," said the Viet Cong delegation in Saigon.

Huong was "only a puppet and part of a game manipulated by the Americans to keep the Thieu clique without Thieu, continue a policy of neocolonialism, sabotage the Paris agreement and interfere with the right to self-determination of the South Vietnamese people," a spokesman added.

An explosive device, meanwhile, blew up in a crowded market in downtown Saigon today, killing or wounding more than six persons and spreading panic.

The North Vietnamese army is so close to the city that South Vietnamese commanders moved the govern-

Air Canada Paris Staff On Strike

PARIS (AP) — Personnel at Air Canada went on strike in Paris today, immobilizing a jetliner that was due to leave for Montreal, a spokesman for the employees said.

About 100 out of the company's 104-person Paris staff went on strike to protest the company's plans to fire 47 employees in an economy move, the strike spokesman said.

"All ground personnel, employees and technical staff are not working," he said. "We are not occupying the plane but it cannot leave." The spokesman said the strike was "indefinite."

The spokesman said the company had told employees the dismissals were meant to save $50,000 in the first year and $300,000 in the following three years.

Alcohol Tops Crash Causes

A compelling need for vigorous enforcement of laws relating to impaired driving was stressed in a report to the legislature Tuesday by Highways Minister Graham Lea.

Alcohol was involved in 228 of the 518 accidents which caused 625 deaths in 1974, the report showed. Of those 228 accidents, 14 per cent involved one or more impaired drivers. The year before 635 were killed in 522 accidents.

As in previous years the report states, responsibility for the majority of fatal accidents must be placed on the shoulders of careless drivers and pedestrians.

Human error connected with drug and alcohol intake, excessive speed, lack of seat belts, and illness or fatigue, all took their toll of B.C.'s motorists.

A failure of motorists to use seat belts drew special mention. Seat belts were not used in 74 per cent of the fatalities, an increase from the previous year's rate of 67 per cent.

"This tends to show a public disregard of the government's Is Your Safety Belt Fastened? highway sign program under way for four years."

Roadside hazards continue to constitute a major hazard, with steep banks, and ditches, utility poles, trees and man-made constructions, the final cause of death in many instances.

The majority of fatal accidents occurred at dusk, between 5 and 6 p.m., accounting for almost eight per cent of the total.

Progress Claimed In CUPE Talks

Significant progress was made for the first time Tuesday in mediation of Greater Victoria civic workers' dispute, but the possibilty of a settlement within a day or two remains over-optimistic according to a management source.

Two days of talks at Royal Oak Inn adjourned until Thursday morning after provincial mediator Clark Gilmour excused himself to meet another commitment today.

Adjournment came some four hours after elected representatives detached themselves from municipal administrators conducting the bargaining through Gilmour, who meets with employers and Canadian Union of Public Employees in separate conference rooms.

"Some very significant progress is being made toward a settlement," the source said. Both sides in the dispute, now 13½ weeks old, recognize that "things are in very good balance," he said.

It was understood the base labor rate for outside workers had been negotiated to within about 10 cents an hour of a rate agreeable to both sides.

However, a report attributed to a union spokesman suggesting a settlement of more than $6 an hour is possible was described as "ridiculous" by the management source.

Union spokesman Tom Smith agreed that some progress was made Tuesday. "I don't want to get people's hopes up. I don't want to be pessimistic or optimistic at this time," Smith said.

"But after three months, hopefully there could be something to take to the membership soon."

Two more days of mediation are scheduled for this week, with the locale changing to School District 61 administration centre and the Camosun College Ewing building. Gilmour will continue to meet the sides independently, going from one building to the other.

JACKLIN SAFETY ACTION PROMISED

Highways Minister Graham Lea promised action today to improve pedestrian safety along Jacklin Road in the vicinity of Belmont-Fisher secondary school.

Lea and Municipal Affairs Minister Jim Lorimer met Jim Campbell, chairman of the Capital Regional Board, and Campbell said later the highways minister said steps would be taken to reduce hazards to those walking along Jacklin.

The road has become a major traffic artery linking the Trans-Canada Highway with the Sooke district and is also the route walked by many children to and from school. Near accidents involving traffic and the heavy flow of pedestrians have produced complaints and petitions.

Campbell said what action to be taken was not detailed but it may be in the form of better separation between road and foot traffic, possibly involving curbing, a verge or preparation of a path for walkers.

The regional board chairman also said that Lorimer has undertaken to speed the process of establishing a committee to study and make recommendations on some form of municipal government for the Colwood-Langford area.

Jet Emergency

OTTAWA (CP) — An Air Canada DC-9 jet was forced to make an emergency landing at Ottawa International Airport Tuesday after mechanical problems developed in one of its two engines. Cause of the problem still is not known.

Longshore Bill

OTTAWA (CP) — A bill to end the three-week strike by 2,200 Quebec longshoremen was introduced in the Commons today by Labor Minister John Munro.

POSTIES BACK ON JOB

OTTAWA (CP) — Letter carriers across Canada returned to work today as a "sign of good faith in bargaining" according to Roger Decarie, president of the Letter Carriers' Union.

Decarie said the selective strike action of the union, which began Monday, would be called off "for one day only" while post office and union negotiators held a "very important meeting."

Mail in Victoria was slowed to a trickle Tuesday and early today as a result of the Vancouver walkout.

By FRANK RUTTER
Times Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON — Canada has given up a claim that the United States owes it compensation for 30 birds, valued at $2 each, three years after a oil spill in which the birds died.

The $60 question, which remains unanswered, was regarded as extremely important because of the precedent involved in settling liability for damages caused by oil spills.

Getting an answer is of growing concern as the time nears when increased numbers of large tankers will be carrying cargoes of oil from the Trans-Alaska pipeline down the West Coast and into the narrow waters separating British Columbia from Washington State, a situation that Canadians fear will inevitably produce a spill of great magnitude.

It was on June 4, 1972, that a connecting joint ruptured on a flow line from the Liberian tanker World Bond to the Atlantic Richfield Company terminal at Cherry Point.

Seventy barrels — or 2,940 gallons—of Iranian crude oil spilled from the ruptured line into the waters of northern Puget Sound.

The spill was cleaned up within six days and Arco, sensitive to public opinion, quickly agreed in principle to pay the costs.

It was not as simple as that, however. It took until now to wind up the case, and even now the key questions of liability remain unresolved.

One basic disagreement has been whether the U.S. government or a private U.S. company should be liable for the results of an oil spill.

Ottawa has maintained that the government is liable. Washington has refused to accept any liability.

Canada won a small point by conducting all negotiations with Arco through the State department, believing that this implies some government liability.

State department, however, insists that it was merely a conduit.

All Canadian attempts failed to get the U.S. government to actually pay for damages, even for the birds.

Last November, Arco wrote Ottawa a cheque for $11,000 to pay for labor involved in cleaning up the spill on the B.C. side.

As the spill was small, Ottawa did not pursue a claim for physical damage to the shoreline. But it did persist in its claim for $60 for the dead sea birds.

Neither the U.S. nor Arco would pay the $60 and this week Ottawa gave up what could have been a precedent-setting cause.

In its note to the State department, Ottawa said it continues to hold the view that someone is liable for damage to wildlife, and reserves the right to pursue future claims.

Aside from refusing direct liability, the U.S. also argued that it was impossible to set a value on birds or to be sure that the birds were Canadian residents.
